"DAKOTA DAN" DEMANDS AUTOPSY

Into Death of William C. Russell

Mayor Announces Candidacy

The TRUTH About Knowles, or the REAL ADVENTURES of the "Dr. Cook of the Maine Woods"

The AMERICAN will tomorrow begin the publication of the most absorbing story ever printed in any newspaper. It is entitled "The Truth About Knowles, or the Real Adventures of the 'Dr. Cook of the Maine Woods.'"

Joe Knowles, ex-Maine guide and artist, went into the Maine woods on August 4. He announced that he would live there for two months the life of primitive man.

For two months following his managers sold to newspapers throughout the country stories of his alleged adventures in wresting a living from the Maine woods.

At the end of two months Knowles himself came out of the woods at Megantic, Quebec, wearing a bear skin which he said he had stripped from a bear which he had killed. He carried a bow and arrows which he said he had made in the woods with his hands.

While Knowles was in the woods, letters came to the AMERICAN from men in Maine declaring that Knowles was not living the life of primitive man in the woods. One man wrote that Knowles was "the Dr. Cook of the Maine woods."

So the AMERICAN sent one of its best reporters into Maine, and with the aid of expert guides he walked over every foot of the Joe Knowles country, or rather where Joe Knowles said he had gone. The AMERICAN reporter found Joe Knowles' bear pit—the scene of the primitive man's own story of the capture of the bear.

The AMERICAN reporter himself had some thrilling adventures in his efforts to learn the truth. The AMERICAN reporter walked several hundred miles, forded icy streams and climbed mountains. He was the first man to greet Joe Knowles at Megantic.

The reporter has just finished a second investigation covering a month.

This reporter's own story begins in next Sunday's AMERICAN. He presents no opinions, no deductions, nothing but facts. Whether or not you have read Knowles' stories or heard him during his lecture tour which is now in progress, you will be thrilled by this reporter's story of one of the greatest feats of twentieth century journalism.

You cannot afford to miss this great story, which begins in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN. It will thrill you and it will make you laugh, for the REAL adventures of Joe Knowles in the woods had many humorous phases.

REMEMBER. The story begins in tomorrow's Sunday AMERICAN—"The Truth About Knowles, or the REAL Adventures of the 'Doctor Cook of the Maine Woods.'"

STIR EAST BOSTON BY CAMPAIGN

Father, sons and brothers of East Boston have united for the protection of their daughters and sisters.

As result of a mass meeting of 150 East Boston men plans were furthered today to unite all classes, colors, nationalities and creeds in the Noddle Island district in a movement to save the girls of the district, not only from attack, but from contamination.

A committee of twenty-five men, including pastors of the Catholic and Protestant churches and of the Hebrew synagogues of the district, is being formed.

No time is being lost, now that the movement to "protect our girls" is under way. There will be a second mass meeting Tuesday night in Fitton Hall, East Boston. If that hall is not large enough an overflow gathering will be held in the Presbyterian church. Young men under twenty-one years of age will not be admitted.

Second Mass Meeting.

Tomorrow every clergyman in East Boston will make public announcement from the pulpit of this Tuesday night meeting and of the reason it is called.

The girl-protection crusade was started some time ago by the priests of the Church of the Most Holy Redeemer. The Protestant clergy immediately joined the work "for moral cleanliness." Finally it was decided that the streets must be roused to real knowledge of conditions. A mass meeting was called in Fitton Hall.

The wide interest in the cause was shown by the different speakers, who included Judge Charles Brown of East Boston District Court (presiding officer), Rev. Thomas F. McGan and Rev. P. H. Riley of the Church of the Most Holy Redeemer, Rev. Herbert A. Manchester of East Boston Presbyterian Church, Rev. Charles Jones of Trenton Street Baptist, Rev. William McDonough of St. Mary's Star of the Sea Church, Headmaster Charles Boland of Samuel Adams school, Captain John A. Brickley of East Boston police station, Judge Joseph Morley of East Boston District Court, and Carl C. Carstens, agent of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Agent Carstens reported twenty-eight cases of wayward children. Captain Brickley urged a rigidly enforced curfew.

Parents Responsible.

"The parents are the ones to blame if the children are on the streets at late hours," said the captain.

Father McGan made the gathering shudder at recital of child-misuse which had come under his notice. He called on all creeds and colors to get a law passed that will keep young girls off the streets at night.

An executive committee of twenty-five was voted. A call was issued for a second meeting Tuesday. Judge Morley will preside. Pending this meeting sentiment is being aroused in every way possible.

Fitzgerald Yields to Demand of the People That He Run Again.

Mayor Fitzgerald formally became a candidate for re-election today when he signed the sheaf of nomination papers brought to his office by Joseph A. Maynard, president of the Democratic City Committee at 12:45 today. The papers were filed with the Election Commissioners shortly before 1 p. m.

"I am glad the uncertainty is over and I think I have done my duty," said the Mayor. "Boston has done much for me and I am led to believe by the petitions that have come to me from innumerable sources that I owe it to Boston to run again. These petitions represent the humble laborer as well as business men, newspapers and men of all political parties in the city. If elected, I shall serve two years only, taking advantage of the charter provision restricting the Mayor's term to two years."

The Mayor's office was crowded to the doors with friends and supporters, each of whom strove to shake hands with the Mayor and congratulate him on his decision.

President Maynard arrived at the Mayor's office at 12:45, accompanied by John J. Sullivan, executive secretary of the City Committee. Mr. Sullivan was laden with a huge mass of papers. Mr. Maynard carried in his pocket five papers, each bearing 100 signatures.

"Mayor Fitzgerald," announced Mr. Maynard, "I have known, and the Democratic voters of Boston have known since the triumph of the State election, that you were averse to again becoming a candidate for Mayor.

Favored by Trade Bodies.

"It was realized at that time by those interested in having you again Mayor of Boston that the demand for your further services came not alone from the strong Democratic majority in Boston, but from our business interests, our trade bodies, and from organizations without regard to party, who desire you to continue to serve the city as its Mayor.

"I have here the names of 20,000 citizens of Boston, signed to formal nomination papers. These names include Democrats, Republicans and citizens who are enrolled under no party designation. I ask you to sign these papers, Mr. Mayor, that you may become a candidate and again be elected Mayor."

Mayor Fitzgerald replied, as he stood by his desk, five pens ranged in front of him ready to place his name on the papers handed him by Mr. Maynard:

"I'll sign these papers, Mr. Maynard, and accept the nomination. I am glad to do it, although my personal inclination has been against entering again into the turmoil of politics.

"I have taken some time to deliberate this question, and I believe that I owe it to Boston, to its business interests and to its progress, to sign these nomination papers."

Quills with which the Mayor signed nomination papers were given to:

President Joseph A. Maynard of the Democratic City Committee.

Joseph Siegel of Henry Siegel Company.

George Macleod of the Fidelity Trust Company.

Executive Clerk John J. Sullivan of the Democratic City Committee.

Representative Peter F. Tague.

Thomas Wilde.

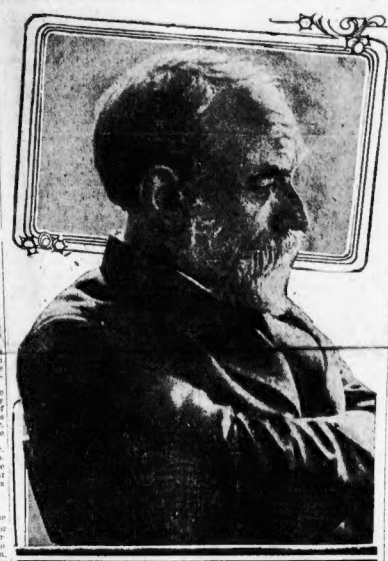
Mayor Signs Papers.

Hardly had he signed the five papers, when Mr. Sullivan gathered up all the papers he had deposited on the floor above. Maynard, Sullivan and Tague carried papers to waiting taxicabs and dashed them to the City Hall Annex in Summer street.

All City Hall immediately tried to get to the Mayor's side. The office was packed with congratulating friends. The Mayor announced that a statement would be issued, stating his stand in the fight. Mr. Maynard assured him that he had already 20,000 signatures, and boosted that he would have filed next week at least 20,000 more. Only 5,000 signatures are necessary for nomination.

At seven minutes of one Mr. Maynard, with Mr. Sullivan, climbed the flight of stairs leading to the Election Commissioners' office, carrying between them a large box containing the Mayor's papers.

W. C. RUSSELL, the older Russell brother, whose sudden death reopens the famous will contest.



SUICIDE AND MURDER RUMORS IN WILL FIGHT

Attorney William R. Scharton, counsel for Dakota Dan, announced this afternoon that he will ask the medical examiner to perform an autopsy on the body of William C. Russell, "in view of the rumors that his death may be due to either murder or suicide."

William C. Russell, holder of the fortune battled for in the famous Russell will fight, died suddenly today at his home in Melrose, following an attack of pleurisy. He was fifty-three years old.

With his death is reopened the greatest of legal contests—the four-year battle of Dakota Dan for a share of the Russell estate. After learning the news of William C. Russell's death, Attorney William R. Scharton, Dakota Dan's counsel, this afternoon announced that he will at once file administration papers as his first move in a new struggle to have his client declared the long-lost Daniel Blake Russell, son of the late Senator Daniel Russell and brother of William C. Russell.

TO DEMAND AUTOPSY ON SUICIDE RUMOR.

Attorney Scharton further declared that he will demand an autopsy on the body of the dead brother. The lawyer said he had received an anonymous letter urging him to investigate William C. Russell's death as Russell had committed suicide.

Attorney Robert W. Nason, counsel for the estate, denied the suicide rumor. "There was absolutely no suicide," said the lawyer emphatically. "William C. would never think of such a thing."

Deceased Left a Will.

It became known this afternoon that William C.—as he was generally known among his friends—made his will a short time ago, after he had won and Dakota

A hundred new policemen have been sworn in. Whether a teamsters' and chauffeurs' strike will be declared depends upon action to be taken by the unionists Sunday.

A discussion of every provision of the administration measure is anticipated when the Senate takes up the bill. The Heflin-Hitchy bill will be taken up by the Senate when it convenes Monday, but the first speech on this measure is not expected to be delivered until Wednesday.

Seven persons prominent in the Russell will fight have died within the past two years. They are:

William C. Russell.

Sarah Ellis Almy, sister of Dakota Dan.

Peter McNally, friend of Russell family.

George L. Coburn, boyhood friend of real Daniel Blake Russell.

J. Augustus Barrett, friend of the Russell family.

Frank Eastman, deputy sheriff and friend of Senator Russell.

Former chief of police of Melrose, Frank M. McLaughlin, who knew real Daniel Blake Russell well.

Raw Meat Richet's Tuberculosis Cure

Nobel Prize Winner Tells Remedy. Admitting Difficulty.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—Professor Charles Richet, the scientist who won the Nobel prize for medicine this year, announces tuberculosis can be cured with raw meat juice.

"The treatment is difficult to follow, he says, "but I have proved its effectiveness. Every day the patient must eat to a slaughter house, get his pounds of fresh meat, then extract the revivifying juice from it. This is a long and tedious task. It yields about half a pint of juice which should be conserved on ice.

"My patients who were suffering from tuberculosis of the lungs were cured of this treatment, although it had to be followed faithfully for three years."

REBELS TRAP FEDERAL ARMY; SLAY HUNDREDS

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 29.—General Robles Navarrete and his entire command of 1,200 men, sent to the relief of Victoria, are hemmed in by the rebels at La Cruz and are fighting for their lives. At least 125 federals have already been slain by the constitutionalists. Navarrette is unable to fight his way out and he must surrender or be annihilated.

Anxiety is felt for Chihuahua City. Communication has been cut off and no report has been received from there for two days.

Train service has been re-established between Nuevo Laredo and Monterey. Several American refugees and Vice-Consul General Robertson and family left Monterey yesterday for Nuevo Laredo.

Between thirty and forty women and children were slain by rebel troops near Saltillo, according to a report received here today.

Troop Train Dynamited.

The new dispatch which caused a stir in diplomatic circles told of the dynamiting of a troop train by the rebels. This was followed by an attack on about a hundred federal soldiers. The women and children were then brutally shot down, every one of them being killed, the report adds. Efforts are being made to secure an official confirmation of the dispatch.

Developments here today indicated that General Huerta and his dictatorship are tottering. The beginning of the end is already in sight. This assurance comes from a diplomat who enjoyed the confidence of the provisional president.

He said today that Huerta himself had little confidence in his ability to hold on much longer, but and expressed his intention of "going down fighting."

Every reverse met by the government forces is reported immediately to the government, but favorable reports are continually given to the newspapers.

Despite the Federal defeat at Juarez, the War Department announced that General Orozco would capture that city within a few hours.

Reliable reports show gains for the rebels everywhere they are fighting in the republic. The chief source of danger to foreigners is in the oil fields around Tuxpan and at Tampico.

Immense damage is being done by rebels in the States of Tamaulipas and Vera Cruz. All railroad bridges from Tampico to Victoria have been dynamited or burned. In southern Vera Cruz roving bands are burning haciendas and small villages.

Fear Firing of Wells!

A battle is imminent in the oil fields around Tuxpam, according to authentic information from Vera Cruz. This will imperil foreign lives and millions of dollars' worth of property owned by foreigners.

That the rebels will carry out their threat to burn oil wells if attacked, is regarded by some of the officials here as by no means improbable. Many foreigners owning property in the neighborhood of Tuxpam are depending upon the promises of the rebel commanders not to molest the wells or tanks.

Advices from Tuxpam and Tampico are meagre because the lines of communication are interrupted. Practically the only method of communication is the wireless from the warships to Vera Cruz, from which point the information thus obtained is relayed to the capital.

Beaten, Rabago Kills Self.

General Rabago, as military governor, felt himself responsible for the fall of Victoria. His relatives today admit their belief, based on private advices, that he killed himself after the fall of the city to the rebels. The government does not admit the suicide.

Details of the suicide were still lacking today. His tragic death is a reminder of the Chinese custom, which compels the loser of a battle to kill himself. Parallels are found on many pages of ancient history.

General Diaz, now in Paris, former President of the republic, and reinstated as a field general in the Mexican army, has not yet signified the probable date of his return to Mexico, although he has accepted the offer of Huerta.

Diaz had declared he would return only to save his country from foreign invasion.

In view of this utterance, his action is regarded by many as highly significant. It is thought to indicate that Diaz expects an invasion by the United States.

BULLETINS

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 29.—The rebels have had another important success. Word reached the capital today that Mazatlan, one of the principal ports of the west coast, fell into the hands of the insurrectos yesterday.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 29.—The government shipped 2,000,000 pesos ($1,000,000) to New York today to pay the interest on National Railway bonds due next month.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Dispatches from Mexico City saying that Huerta has cabled to Porfirio Diaz in Paris to return and assume his old military command were interpreted in administration circles here today as convincing evidence that the power of Huerta is crumbling.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 29.—Plans for the defence of foreigners are being rushed to completion in Mexico City as a result of the southern movement of General Villa's rebel army and the renewed activity of 8,000 Zapatistas in States adjoining the federal territory.

VERA CRUZ, Nov. 29.—The German cruiser Bremen arrived here today from Tampico. The United States battleship New Jersey has left for Tuxpam and Tampico to guard American interests.

TELLS HOW THE TEACHERS BEAT CHICAGO TRUST

Miss Margaret Haley described to the School Voters League today in Ford Hall how the Chicago Teachers' Federation fought the great interests and trusts until thousands of dollars were brought into the city treasury and teacher's salaries had been raised to equal any in the United States.

A large number of teachers listened intently to the dramatic recounting of the fight against graft, politics and the big interests, as vividly described by the one who has been in the thickest of the struggle for higher salaries and better education of Chicago children.

"I am not here to organize teachers into a union," she declared. "I do not see the conditions here, and it would be out of place for me to say just who you should vote for. I do not express a single word in the local situation, but I do know that the organization of the teachers in Chicago and their affiliation with the American Federation of Labor has won for them better salaries and better conditions, not only for themselves, but for children and workers all over the city.

"The Governor of Illinois, who signed the woman's suffrage bill said he had been won over to the cause by the work of the Chicago Teachers' Federation.

"After the teachers had struggled and fought until they had succeeded in taxing into the city of Chicago $600,000 from extra taxable property, they received a part of it for increased salaries.

"The fight has finally been won, however, but by the school officials in good positions, but by the grade teachers who have least to lose and who are as far down as possible."

According to Miss Haley, $200,000,000 of valuable franchises granted to the street railway company, the gas and the telephone companies had never been taxed until the teachers compelled them to declare their property.

Boy Begs Doctors to Allow Him to Die

Found Unconscious from Illuminating Gas in South End House.

Melvin Bradbury, 15, of Rochester street, South End, attempted suicide today by inhaling gas. Early this morning the boy's mother, Mrs. Angeline Bradbury, smelled gas. She went to her son's room and found him unconscious on the bed with gas flowing freely from an open jet.

When questioned by hospital attendants and the police the boy pleaded to be allowed to die, saying: "I want to die. I'm out of work and discouraged." He is in a serious condition.

To Question Keene in Piper Inquiry

FAIRFIELD, Me., Nov. 29.—Special Agent F. P. Schmidt of Boston, who has been conducting the investigation of the abduction of Miss Lois M. Piper from her home, by an alleged band of kidnapers, is expected to make a complete report to the Federal authorities within a few days.

Government agents are also seeking Harry R. Keene with the intention of questioning him concerning his own disappearance from Fairfield at the time of Miss Piper's abduction.

Schmidt has interrogated Miss Piper fully, regarding her remarkable experience in which she says she was drugged by poisoned candy in Waterville, Me., and taken to Boston, where she was held prisoner for over a week.

WM. C. RUSSELL DEAD BY SHOCK IN MELROSE

Dan had lost the second lengthy battle in the case.

Following the decision against the Dakotan, this will was drawn up by Attorney Nason. In it an administrator is named. None of the estate lawyers would discuss its contents.

Dakota Dan was at work as a helper in the Fore River shipyards—a job secured only a few days ago—when he heard of the death of the man he claims is his brother. He at once came to Boston and conferred with Attorney Sharrton. The latter stated that his first step will be to petition the Middlesex Probate Court to be made administrator of the dead man's estate, as a protection for his client.

Seek Trial by Jury.

By taking this step—the lawyer declared—the whole case of Dakota Dan's identity and claims to both the estate of Senator Russell and of "William C." would be again brought into court for a new trial. The Dakotan declared his great hope to be an ultimate trial by jury of his claims.

"That's what I have been trying to get for several years—a trial by a jury," he said.

Fresno Dan, the successful claimant in both will trials, was declared by Attorney Eugene C. Upton of counsel for the estate to be probably on his way East from a trip to relatives and friends in Illinois. After the decision by Master Gilbert A. A. Pevey several weeks ago against Dakota Dan, Fresno went West for a trip.

Whether or not Fresno Dan is a beneficiary under the will of William C. remained a mystery. Attorney Scharton stated that "somebody will claim a brother's share of what is left of the estate, but Fresno Dan is nowhere to be found."

Then he added:

"Nobody knows where Fresno is. His one not been heard from for some time. Whether or not Fresno Dan shows up will determine whether he is an impostor or not.

Scharton Urged to Probe Death.

"Neighbors tell me that William C. Russell is a suicide on account of the notoriety of the case and the depletion of the estate due to the expensive will quits. I have an anonymous letter telling me there are suspicious circumstances and urging me to have an investigation of the death. I shall demand an autopsy."

"I shall have Dakota Dan write a letter to the medical examiner demanding that in view of the rumors that William C. Russell's death may be due to either murder or suicide, an autopsy be performed to determine the exact cause of death.

"Dakota Dan's position is stronger now than ever because as things now stand we have the right to contest the will of William C. Russell.

"The question now becomes a straight out and out fight between Dakota Dan and Fresno Dan. William C. Russell is dead by his death the battle between Dakota Dan and Fresno for the entire estate."

Fortune Has Dwindled.

It was stated today that only a scant third of the original fortune of $500,000 left by the late Senator Russell remains.

The other two-thirds, it is explained, have been dissipated in the battles against Dakota Dan. It has been estimated that the cost of the first trial decided by Judge Lawton against Dakota Dan was $150,000 to the estate, and that the cost to the estate of he second battle before Master Pevey was $70,000 or more.

Attorney Nason said today:

"I shall await developments. I do not think his death will interrupt the litigation in the case.

"I can't discuss the contents of the will. I can't discuss Fresno Dan; I can't tell who was named as administrator in the will.

"I expected Mr. Sharton might take some such step as seeking to be made administrator, but the will has named an administrator."

Small Army of Relatives.

"Would Fresno have got any of the estate if there had been no will?" Attorney Nason was asked.

"I believe he would," he replied.

"Was Fresno well cared for in the will?"

"I can't tell you that."

"Are there many relatives?"

"Yes, there is a small army of lesser relatives."

"Any immediate relative?"

"Yes, an aunt, Hannah Lynde. She testified in the first trial, but not at the second."

"Fresno" on Way East.

It was understood this will was to be filed at the East Cambridge court next week.

Attorney Upton corroborated the statement that William C. Russell had left a will. Asked about how Fresno Dan fares, he replied:

"You can't get anything out of me on that. Mr. Russell has been dead but a few hours, and it is a little premature to discuss his will. I think Fresno is probably now on his way East."

Dr. John Dike, who attended the late Senator Russell in his last illness, was the physician who has been attending William C. Russell. Dr. Dike, whose office is in Melrose, said:

"Mr. Russell was taken sick about a week ago with a heavy cold. This developed into bronchial trouble. Later this developed into pleurisy from which he died."

The last inventory of the Russell estate at Melrose was made in 1907. It showed the valuation of the estate to be $471,248.93 at that time.

Fight Proved Costly.

However, the two battles to stave off Dakota Dan proved costly and drained the defence's resources. Some time ago it was rumored the estate had dwindled to about a quarter of a million dollars.

"Dakota Dan's" claim to recognition were aggressively resisted by Robert W. Nason, the chief counsel for the Russell estate. William C. Russell, the elder son, various near relatives of the Russells, old friends of the family and fourful companions of Daniel Blake Russell, all declared that the Western rancheman was not and could not be the man who left Melrose in June, 1885.

Counsel for the estate maintained that the claimant was "Jim" Russell, a French Canadian, whose parents and sisters and brothers lived near Messina, N. Y. On one eventful day an elderly woman went on the witness stand and testified that "Dakota Dan" was her son, James Delbert Russell. She appealed to him, to acknowledge his mother but he insisted that he did not know her and had never seen her before.

Fresno Poor Laborer.

The hearings before Judge Lawton were nearing the end when news came that an impoverished laborer in Fresno, Cal., had told the police of that city that he was Daniel Blake Russell, and on their advice had retained an attorney to protect his interests. This new sensation in the Russell case came in March, 1910, six months after Judge Lawton began the inquiry.

"Fresno Dan," with his attorney, Senator George Cartwright, started for Boston. He was met by a corps of lawyers to whom he gave an interview and some sketches of the Russell house and a plan of the surroundings, which were published made a deep impression upon William C. Russell, and asserted the man a friendly reception. "Fresno Dan" was questioned for days by the attorneys for the Russell estate in the presence of William C. Russell, and a score of persons whose judgment they had confidence were instructed to examine the latest claimant and give their opinions.

"Fresno Dan," through his attorney, asked permission to intervene in the proceedings before Judge Lawton, but this privilege was denied. The trial went on until April 1, 1910. There had been 125 days of literal trial and 50 days of argument and testified. The expense to the Russell estate was estimated at $150,000 and to the claimant $30,000.

PROMOTER ILL, THINKS THAT HE IS CROESUS

Hezekiah C. Welch, the general manager of the International Trading & Finance Company of Constantinople, is suffering from a strange, unnamed malady, according to his physician, Dr. John F. Welch. Welch believes he is richer than Croesus, that he is carrying on all sorts of huge business deals, and talks fluently about them. He collapsed on Northampton street a month ago.

According to the attorney for the $15,000,000 trading company of which he was general manager, Clarence W. Dealtry, Welch owes perhaps $50,000. The trading company never did any business. It was incorporated in Arizona, and very little of the capital stock was paid in.

"Mr. Welch is suffering from a strange mental aberration," said Dr. Welch. "There is nothing in this disease from which he cannot recover, however.

Believes He is Croesus.

"At times the patient believes he is a Croesus, and talks fluently about the huge business deals involving millions he is putting through. His memory, however, of the last few years, since he has been in business is a blank. He recalls perfectly, his personal history and experiences before six years ago.

"His work and his intense desire to become a business man probably is responsible for his condition. He had a breakdown about three weeks ago. Since then he has been in my care. He is about thirty-six years old, and there is nothing I can discover to prevent his ultimate recovery."

Clarence W. Dealtry, attorney for the trading company said:

"I am not astonished at the character or the business dealings of Mr. Welch should he impeached by anyone. The men whose names have been mentioned this morning as suggesting an investigation called on me yesterday. They are indignant that their names should have been mentioned in any such way.

Creditors Feel Secure.

"It is true that Welch owes some money, in purely, strictly honest business deals—not more than $50,000. His creditors have discussed his indebtedness with me, and are satisfied that he will eventually take care of all the financial burdens he has assumed.

"The international Trading and Finance Company was organized about a year ago with the purpose of doing a transcontinental business with Turkey. It was capitalized for $15,000,000—but that means nothing—under the laws of Arizona. I believe that very little capital was paid in.

"Soon after the formation of the company the war with Turkey put a stop to all business. The offices of the company were maintained for a while, but soon discontinued. The company never did a cent's worth of business."

Probe Algonquin Club Death Further

Medical Examiner Believes G. I. Fevear Died in Sleep.

A further examination of the body of G. Irving Fevear, the former Lynn morocco manufacturer, who died suddenly at the Algonquin club in Commonwealth avenue, will be made by Medical Examiner Magrath today. The cause of death has not been determined. Dr. Magrath said Fevear apparently died in his sleep.

Fevear was found dead in his room at the club by a valet. He had not been seen since he retired the night before, and had complained of neuritis pains. He retired from business about two years ago and last week returned from a hunting and fishing trip in Maine.

Moral Wave May Hit Innocent Plays

LONDON, Nov. 29.—The wave of theatrical morality now sweeping over London may drive innocent plays from the boards.

Dramatic critics almost unanimously denounced the Garrick Theatre version of "La Presidente" as salacious, offensive, indecent, suggestive and impudent, and the censor was savagely scored for licensing it. That morning the house was sold out for five weeks ahead, one hour after the boxoffice opened.

The Bishop of Kensington and other morality commissioners who attended the play were described as laughing heartily, and they reported that they saw nothing objectionable. The advance bookings then suddenly began sagging. It was suggested that the naughtiness had been toned down and the bookings nearly arrested. Louis Meyer, the producer, indignantly denied this, declaring that not a syllable of the dialogue nor an atom of the business had been changed from the first night.

Famous For Her Hair

Actress Tells How She Grew It.

Madame Rose, the well-known actress who played on one of the leading vaudeville circuits the past winter and who is especially noted for her long, beautiful hair, in a recent interview in Chicago, made the following statement: "Any lady or gentleman can promote the growth of their hair and make it soft and glossy with this simple recipe, which they can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ½ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. This is not only the finest hair grower I have ever known, but it prevents the hair from falling out, removes dandruff and scalp humors, darkens streaked, faded gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. The ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost."—Adv.

To Commercial Travelers

TWENTY years ago, when Munsey's Magazine struck out on new and popular lines, bounding as it did into a nation-wide circulation, you, the Traveling Men of America, were among the first to recognize its merits and did more than any other body of men to support it and commend it to your friends and acquaintances.

Now, just two decades later, I am giving you another new type of magazine in The Munsey—this time a far bigger and far better magazine than before.

With its full book-length novel, complete in each issue, Munsey's Magazine is preeminently the magazine for you commercial men who have long hours to while away on railway trains and in hotels away from home. So situated, there isn't much satisfaction in reading a fragment of a novel—just a sop, that's all.

But there is a lot of satisfaction in finding in your magazine a full complete novel—exactly the kind you would pay $1.50 for in book form. And there is a further satisfaction in the fact that in Munsey's Magazine you will get this novel for 15 cents—get novel and all the other features, illustrated and unillustrated, that go to make up a standard illustrated magazine.

Get the December Munsey and read George Barr McCutcheon's great novel, "Black is White." I strongly recommend it.

WOMEN TAKE SIDES ON BRIEUX FAMOUS PLAY

The proposed production of Brieux's masterly play, "Damaged Goods," at the Tremont Theatre next week, has aroused a storm of comment, favorable and otherwise, throughout Greater Boston. The controversy has already reached the Mayor's office.

One of the keenest critics of the play, who declares that the medical lesson it teaches is overshadowed by the fact that it is openly presented on the stage, is Dr. Paul Thorndike, who today made an appointment with Mayor Fitzgerald personally to protest against the performance.

The Suffolk Medical Society has passed resolutions endorsing the play, and urging its production. President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot of Harvard is also in favor of its presentation. Among Boston women who urge that the play be allowed are Margaret Deland, the author, and Mrs. Lowell Putnam.

Totally opposed to the play, on the grounds that such matters should be hidden in the doctor's office, are Miss Mary Prendergast, who is circulating a petition to the Mayor against the performance. Dr. George B. Stevens of Dorchester, Robert M. Burnett and others are also strenuous opponents of the drama.

Mayor Fitzgerald declared that he still has an open mind about the play, although he has received many protests and an equal number of letters in favor of allowing its presentation. Under the law, he is required to permit one performance before taking action. The municipal censors will be on hand, however, and decide whether the play shall be withdrawn, as was Eugene Walter's "Easiest Way."

Society Woman Is Dance Invalid

Rushes from the New "Matchiche" to Surgeon's Knife.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Mrs. R. H. Thomas, a noted society woman, raced across the Atlantic for an operation made necessary by her passion for dancing. She arrived on the Lusitania, and went at once to her home, No. 340 Park avenue.

"They are simply wild about the tango in Paris," said Mrs. Thomas, "and they have out-tangoed the tango with a new dance over there. It is called the 'Matchiche,' and I have nearly danced myself to death, I like it so much. It was because I danced so ardently the operation is made necessary.

"I did not want to leave the dances, but when the doctor said that I must I preferred to come to New York. My husband had a hard time persuading me to leave off the dancing, but as soon as I recover from the operation I am going back to Paris and make up for lost time."

Mr. Thomas has homes in London and Paris, besides the house in this city.

CALL HUB MASS MEETING TO AID MRS. WAKEFIELD

Ford Hall will tomorrow evening give voice to the rapidly growing protest that is going up all over the land demanding that the death penalty for Mrs. Bessie Wakefield be stayed, and that the condemned woman be granted her life.

"Shall She Pay With Her Life?" is the title of a poem to be recited by Miss Angela Morgan, who wrote the verses after visiting Mrs. Wakefield in the prison at Wethersfield, Ct., after making the acquaintance of the condemned woman's aged mother and two children, George and Cora Bell.

The scene was a touching one and aroused Miss Morgan over what she felt to be the terrible cruelty of a system of society that will harbor the conditions that lead up to the tragedy without lifting a hand to help a despairing sister, and then condemn the same girl to be hanged when she has committed a desperate crime.

Under the stress of her emotions, and feeling the injustice of law that can thus accuse and condemn, Miss Morgan wrote the poem that has stirred thousands of people to rise up and demand pardon from capital punishment for Bessie Wakefield.

The poem, strong and virile, ringing with a call for higher ideals, becomes treely effective when spoken by the author.

George W. Colesnus, director of the Ford Hall meetings, will precede Miss Morgan with a short account of the movement on foot to save Mrs. Wakefield as pioneered by the AMERICAN and humane societies that feel the great injustice of Mrs. Wakefield's impending punishment.

The recitation will be followed by an address of Peter Clark Macfarlane on "The Courage to Attack."

SAYS HARVARD STUDENT'S LOVE COST $100,000

That a prominent New York financier and railroad king, while his son was at Harvard, was forced to pay $100,000 in trust for a certain Boz Bay woman, to avoid family disgrace, is the declaration of Mrs. Richard Amberton, better known as Peggy Walton, whose career in Bohemian circles of Boston is well known to Harvard men.

Mrs. Amberton, who says that a number of women are closely allied in a marriage swindle scheme to mulct the families of rich students, is also responsible for the statement that a well-to-do Boston lawyer is the father of a majority of the schemes which she claims have been successfully worked.

In the one case cited by Mrs. Amberton, she declares that while the New Yorker's son was at Harvard he found himself in the toils of the "gang." Exposure was threatened, whereupon, according to her story, the financier placed the large sum at her disposal, the income to be hers for life.

Later, says Mrs. Amberton, the young man married one of the richest women in New York. It is also said that a divorce suit may ensue.

Mrs. Amberton credits a Boston lawyer with being the "brains of the organization." She says that the schemes and the methods whereby the Harvard men became acquainted with the young women were arranged, or rather "staged" by the lawyer himself, who, later, once the men were safely snared, took the case of the women and forced a settlement.

The declaration is also made that in most cases the scheme is merely one of exploiting the women in the case for his own benefit, and that the women have seldom seen any part of the "blackmail" alleged to have been levied upon the young men.

Mrs. Amberton says that the meetings between students and their future "wives" was usually arranged by "accident," either at a Back Bay hotel, or else at some resort in a Boston suburb, and that the lawyer himself usually made the introductions.

MISS CLARIBEL CHAVENEY of Jefferson, Mass., who is believed by many in her home town to be the one who should win the Typical American Girl prize.

is the typical girl of America a suffragist?

There is a question that may give the artist judges no end of tremor.

Of course she may say what she believes when she sends in her photograph, but many who have already contributed pictures have indicated their beliefs and their habits.

One claimant says that she is perfectly content to let the men take care of the votes, because, as she explains, she believes that woman's place is in the home.

This contest will not line up on the suffragist question and there is no certainty that the subject will ever come up between the two men and the one woman judges. But what is strongly character in any photograph will be considered and if a girl looks to be of the independent sort that is always demanding her rights her views will be a factor in the choice.

Those who are looking forward with much uncertainty will be interested to know whether the typical girl has come into the suffragist movement or whether she is still to the rushes of her forenoon row, with a belief that home and the family is her sphere.

The contest will continue next week and all kinds of photographs will be welcome. Remember if always are enclosed your photograph will be returned.

The prize, which will be presented to the "typical American girl" when she is selected by the judges in this great contest, will be a life-size oil portrait of herself, painted by a noted New England artist, from personal sittings.

MRS. SANDO WINS CHILDREN PENDING SUIT

Society is today discussing with considerable interest the testimony brought out at the hearing for an allowance for Mrs. Joseph Blair Sando, whose husband recently brought suit for divorce, naming Robert F. Guild, coach of the Harvard second football team, as corespondent.

Sando, who is a graduate of Technology, was ordered to pay his wife $75 a week alimony pending the hearing of his divorce suit, and a lump sum of $50 as counsel fees to defend the action. Mrs. Sando was given the temporary custody of the three children.

In testifying Mrs. Sando admitted having been with Guild on three occasions in an apartment owned by a Mrs. Lewis. They were talking over the affairs of the Sando family, she said. Once Mrs. Lewis was present, she said; on the other occasions she was alone with Guild.

Sando told the court he had had detectives on his wife's trail for nearly a month and that they had reported progress.

According to Mrs. Sando's story, her husband came home intoxicated on November 11, and threatened to shoot her. Mrs. Sando asserted he is addicted to the use of whiskey and absinthe. She said she had left their home in Watertown at 1 o'clock in the morning, making her exit through a window. She said she carried her three children in a taxicab to the home of her parents in University road, Brookline.

She denied having been in Guild's company nearly every day from October 15 to November 11. She did not recall whether Guild had visited her home while her husband was away. Mrs. Sando said she knew Guild was married, and said that she had known his wife for eight years. Guild has visited her since she has been at her mother's house, she said, and they are on friendly terms.

Sando testified he is getting $250 a month. While they lived in Seneca Falls, N. Y., his wife ran up bills of $1,200, he said, in two years. He had borrowed money from his mother to pay his debts, and had made up about $600 of the amount to her. He said that he is overdrawn $88.22 on his salary because of debts.

He denied he was drunk when his wife left him Nov. 11. Occasionally he had a bottle of whiskey in the house, but not often, he said. He said he had only had one bottle of absinthe in the house.

CHAPTER LXXXIII.

"Honor thy father and thy mother," stands written among the three laws of most revered righteousness."—Josephus.

On Monday, January 28, the Thaw trial was renewed and something else happened. Howard Nesbit, Evelyn's brother, came out in a column interview of hot-blooded protest against a lot of things which had been said about himself, and particularly about his mother, Mrs. Holman.

The interview was printed in the Boston AMERICAN of that date under Nesbit's name. It ran in part as follows:

In order that anyone may understand our position in regard to the Thaw case—and by "our" I refer to my mother and myself—it is necessary for him to place himself in a similar position. Without implying that may be the degree of importance that my testimony possesses, the matter was put squarely up to me in this form—either to lay myself open to the charge of aiding my cousin, Mr. Thaw, possibly out of revenge, or to stay away from the trial, remain silent, and allow my mother to suffer under the implications that have been cast upon her.

There are two things which I wish thoroughly understood. My feelings toward Mr. Thaw are indifferent, as far as they can be. By that I mean—and I wish it emphasized—that I am not bitter, that I am not seeking revenge on him. If vengeance is to come it will not come through me, only so far as my truthful, unbiased statements on the stand may weigh for or against him.

Mr. Thaw is my sister's husband and, because of that, I could not help but regret if the trial terminated in the worst way possible to him. The law will act as equally with him as it does with any other man, no matter how rich or poor he may be.

To Defend His Mother.

The other thing that I wish understood is that my object, above all things, is to defend my mother. It is not necessary to go over the charges that have been brought against her.

It also seemed to me that a question of what might be my duty to the memory of Mr. White would enter into the case. Mr. White, as my benefactor and the sincere and honest friend of my mother, earned my deep appreciation and gratitude. Should I do what little I could to defend his name, or stay silent and not attempt to lift the charges that have been buried at him?

I have no hesitation in declaring that so deeply do I respect and honor the memory of Mr. White that, should it be proved to me that my faith in him was misplaced, it would nearly break my heart.

My faith in him is open to challenge. I have no fear of the result. I do not know what questions may be asked of me on the stand, either by the District Attorney or by Mr. Thaw's lawyers. But, whatever they are, or whatever my answers may indicate, I shall tell nothing except the truth. What the effect may be I do not know, and I am not worried about it.

Is there a son worthy of the name of a like country who would refrain from clearing the name of a mother who has been assailed as mine has even if he were accused of trying to revenge himself upon the man who placed her in such a false position.

My mother has been charged with selling her daughter. That is a lie, absolutely and without qualification. That will be proved. I do not care who brings this charge. It is unqualifiedly false. Good sense and discretion, not self-interest, have induced my mother to remain absolutely silent from the night of the murder until today.

Had Suffered Deeply.

Her aim and unselfish object have been to refrain from doing or saying anything that might prejudice the case of the defendant. And even now, if she is defended at the trial, it will be in consequence of questions which some of the witnesses for the defence may be expected to bring out.

My mother has suffered deeply. Even now she is ill from the strain and the worry to which she has been subjected. We could not prevent her from hearing some of those dreadful stories, although we have tried to keep her from reading or hearing them.

Some newspapers have gone so far as to intimate that she and my father (Charles J. Holman, really his stepfather) have been holding back, hoping to receive sums of money from the Thaws for not taking sides.

If all the money that the Thaws have should be placed before either my father or my mother they would not be swerved from the course they know is right. They would do just as they have been doing and just as they are now doing.

No children ever had a better mother than my sister and I. She struggled, worked and almost starved for us. Possibly it will never be known what trials and privations she experienced in trying to keep the family together and to bring us up properly.

And she did bring us up properly. Whatever we may have done or may do in the future, none of it, if it is discreditable, can be charged up against my mother for any shortcomings in her way of rearing us.

If pity is to be lavished on any person connected with this affair, my mother should receive her share. All of the hard words and insinuations in the newspapers have been for her, but none of the excuses or sympathetic expressions.

Evelyn Not Abandoned.

Here is one example that appeared a day or two ago. Reference was made to my sister being abandoned in her hour of need and being forsaken by her mother, to whom she would naturally look for consolation.

My sister has been neither abandoned, deserted nor forsaken by her mother or any other member of her family. My mother is not the kind of woman who would desert her daughter in time of trouble.

This is perhaps the proper time, also, to deny some of the statements that have been published concerning myself. A New York paper made the statement that my father and I had quarrelled, and that I had left home for good because he found me playing poker in a Pittsburgh hotel. The intimation was that I am a confirmed gambler.

That is a lie. My father and I are on the best of terms. He is a kind, honorable, upright man, and I respect and hold a deep affection for him. He did not find me playing poker. I do not know how to play poker or any other game of cards.

Thaw Likens Case to Penal Servitude

"Present Detention Worse," Counsel Tells Court

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 29.—Harry K. Thaw's "present detention is worse than penal servitude," his counsel declares to the United States Court in his answer to the State of New York in the habeas corpus proceedings by which the execution of Governor Felker's extradition warrant is stayed. Thaw says that custody under the Governor's warrant was not legal and proper, and that Sheriff Dewey is not entitled to have such custody restored, because the alleged New York custody was founded on due custody in law.

It is conceded that the Thaw case will not come up in the United States District Court before February 11.

I am scarcely able to tell one cat from another.

Perhaps it might be well, too, to say that this interview is a protest against widespread misunderstandings.

Howard Nesbit's statement was impressive. It seemed to represent all the bottled-up grievance in the young man's breast. He apparently felt that, now he was attending the court sessions, he must put himself in the eyes of the public and must, above all, come to the aid of his mother in the face of the insinuations which had been buried broadcast at the unhappy woman.

To Be Continued.

Stops Tobacco Habit in One Day

Sanitarium Publishes Free Book Showing How Tobacco Habit Can Be Banished In From One to Five Days at Home.

The Elkers Sanitarium, located at 695 Main St., St. Joseph, Mo., has published a free book showing the dangerous effect of the tobacco habit and how it can be banished in from one to five days at home.

Men who have used tobacco for more than fifty years have tried this method, and say it is entirely successful, and, in addition to benefiting the desire for tobacco, has increased their health wonderfully. This method banishes the desire for tobacco, no matter whether it is smoking, chewing, cigarettes or snuff dipping.

As this book is being distributed free, any one wanting a copy should send their name and address at once.

REAR-ADMIRAL BLUE CALLS FOR NAVAL RESERVE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—The need of a national naval reserve to strengthen the United States navy is emphasized in the annual report of Rear-Admiral Victor Blue, chief of the Bureau of Navigation, submitted to Secretary of the Navy Daniels today.

"The importance of having a regularly enrolled and organized naval reserve for service in time of war cannot be too forcibly impressed upon the country," says the report.

"The authorized enlisted strength of the navy in time of peace consists of 51,500 men. The falls short of the number required to commission for active service the fighting ships which are now held in reserve in ordinary or out of commission undergoing repairs."

Rear Admiral Blue advocates that the nucleus of the reserve force be sailors and marines whose term of enlistment have expired.

"Many thousands of these men are now in civil life," the report says, "and they are a valuable asset for war which the country can ill afford to overlook."

Al Adams' Widow Wins Suit of Seer

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Mrs. Isabella V. Adams, widow of Al Adams, need not pay $30,000 to Mrs. Marguerite Gilbert, a fortune teller, under a decision of the Supreme Court dismissing Mrs. Gilbert's complaint. The testimony showed that in 1907, prior to the death of Al Adams, Mrs. Adams gave her jewels worth $30,000 to Mrs. Gilbert in consideration of the latter's promise to protect Mrs. Adams and her family from impending ills through the influence of Hagu, an alleged Indian sorceress.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my case of rupture was an operating. Trusses did me no good. Finally I found a way to cure myself and have completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information how you may find complete cure, without operation, if you write to me. Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 769 Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better not suffering longer with a rupture when you can get relief and cure without pain, danger, time, the misery of rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.

MANY DOCTORS IN COURT FOR KNABE TRIAL

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Nov. 29.—Medical and legal Indianapolis had a big representation at the trial of Dr. William B. Craig, charged with the murder of Dr. Helen Knabe today.

Coroner Charles C. Durham, Doctors E. C. Ryder, Frank Wynn, Charles H. Ferguson, Ralph Chappell and M. C. Leeth reported as witnesses as soon as court opened.

The doctors mentioned were among the first to arrive at the scene of the woman's death, shortly after the discovery of the blood-covered body.

Dr. Craig and Marion, his thirteen-year-old daughter, arrived early and were in splendid spirits when court convened. Tentative Juror Samuel Huepp was absent, no cause being assigned. Tentative Juror John Adams was challenged for cause by the defense when the State again passed the jury over. He was excused and the examination of veniremen was resumed.

Hobble Too Tight, Shovel Girl in Car

Workmen Aid Pretty Damsel in Dire Distress.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 29.—Passengers on an eastbound car were astonished today to see a handsome young woman shovelled aboard the car by two workmen. The street had been dug up, making the step high.

Several times she tried to reach the step, but was unsuccessful, owing to the tightness of her skirt. Forming a platform with their shovels, the workmen lifted the young lady aboard.

Wire Gauze Guards Auto of Asquith

END STRIKE OF GENERAL ELECTRIC CO.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Nov. 29.—The strike of the 15,000 men and women employed at the General Electric Company here came to an end today. It began last Tuesday and since that time the great plant of the company has been completely tied up.

Peace terms were agreed upon at a conference held this afternoon by a committee representing the strikers and officials of the company. This was ratified immediately by the Electrical Trades Alliance and the strike came to an end. The employes will return to work Monday.

Frank Dujay and Miss Mabel Leslie, the labor leaders whose discharge was the immediate cause of the strike, are to be re-employed, although not reinstated in the positions they formerly held. The General Electric Company will hold to its former policy in regulating the number of employes to meet trade conditions. Out of town men will be laid off first, single men next and married men last.

Earle Threatened Woman Is Charge

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—F. Piney Earle, seeking a hiding place here for his son Harold, whom he kidnaped in Paris, tried in several letters to obtain aid from Mrs. Paul Herman and her husband, the foster parents of Charlotte Herman, who is now being sought with Earle on a kidnaping charge. This is the claim of Herman, who said:

"Earle threatened at one time to compromise Charlotte, whom he called Vale, the name she used on the before plaform. In almost every letter he demanded help."

NEW HAVEN TO STOP USING ALBANY TRACKS

The Boston & Albany operating agreement between the New Haven and New York Central Railroads will end in a few weeks, according to forecast made by the Boston News Bureau today. The same authority also speculates upon the possibility of the New Haven road being separated into its integral parts to the extent of divorcing it from not only the Boston & Maine and the Fitchburg, but also from the old New England road, formerly the New York & New England.

The News Bureau says:

"This New Haven-Albany agreement became effective July 1, 1911. In the two intervening years to June 30 last, the Albany & Albany showed deficits of $36,319 and $294,828 respectively—a total of $241,157. There was consequently a direct loss of $120,578 to the New Haven, except for what indirect advantages it may have derived.

"In view of the Washington idea, to reestablish competitive conditions through big competitive units, it is reasonable to expect that, besides seeking a disruption of the New Haven's control of Boston & Maine and the latter's lease of the Fitchburg Railroad, there will be an effort to leave not even the New Haven itself intact.

"If Connecticut is to receive similar treatment to that which the Department of Justice would accord more northern States, it is asserted that it is but logical to expect that the federal dissolution suit will seek to divorce from the New Haven the old New England Railroad."

ANTIDOTES FOR '13 MISTAKES OF LIFE' ARE FOUND

The "Boulevard Column" in the AMERICAN'S Sporting Extra, which you buy on the streets at supper time every week night, has won nation-wide discussion. Ten days ago there was published in the column "Thirteen Mistakes in Life," formulated by Judge Rentoul of the City of London Court, and prominently displayed to office-seekers and other visitors to Mayor Fitzgerald's office.

The "mistakes" have been copied and reprinted all over the country, and have drawn "replies" and "answers" galore. Among others, Judge Thomas C. Crain of the Court of General Sessions in New York has formulated "Thirteen Rules of Life" as antidotes for the mistakes.

The Thirteen Mistakes.

Here are the original "Thirteen Mistakes":

To attempt to set up your own standard of right and wrong and expect everybody to conform to it.

To try to measure the enjoyment of others by your own.

To expect uniformity of opinions in this world.

To look for judgment and experience in youth.

To endeavor to mold all dispositions alike.

Not to yield in unimportant trifles.

To look for perfection in our own action.

To worry ourselves and others about what cannot be remedied.

Not to help everybody, wherever, however and whenever we can.

To consider anything impossible that we cannot ourselves perform.

To believe only what our finite minds can grasp.

Not to make allowances for the weaknesses of others.

To estimate people by some outside quality, for it is that within which makes the man.

Kipling's Rules of Life.

"The thirteen mistakes of life as enumerated by Judge Rentoul are admirable," said Judge Crain, who occupies a position in the public eye similar to that occupied by the London jurist, "and I doubt whether they could be improved upon. If, in this connection, Kipling's poem entitled, 'If,' is read, the reader will have from both the positive and the negative standpoints what it is that constitutes a man."

From this Kipling poem suggested by Judge Crain, the following "Rules of Life" are drawn:

Keep your head at all times.

Trust yourself above every one else.

Do not deal in lies.

Do not give way to hating, even though you are hated.

Do not look too proud.

Do not talk too wise.

Talk with the crowds, but keep your virtue.

Walk with kings, if you will, but do not lose sight of the common people.

Live every day so that neither your foes nor your friends can hurt you.

Let all men count with you, but none too much.

Make allowance for all doubts.

Fill every minute with sixty seconds of work.

Be a man.

WOMAN LOST SHOP FIGHTING BAD EGG TRUST

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

Here's a story of how a woman lost her small store and her means of livelihood because she helped the campaign against the rotten egg dealers in Malden.

Mrs. Mae Gregory of East Boston is the woman. She is the wife of Peter F. Gregory. Mrs. Gregory is a victim of hip disease.

Mr. Gregory is an engraver by trade. By careful wing, Mrs. Gregory saved enough start a grocery store at No. 268 Pleasant street, Malden. She called it the "People's Store."

It was hard sledding for her at the start, but things prospered. Mrs. Gregory helped her husband in tending store.

Last September I received many complaints about the rotten eggs sold to Malden people. Investigation proved the rotten egg dealers were doing a land office business.

In the face of common knowledge, the State Board of Health was doing nothing to stop the vile traffic. I decided to secure evidence against the dealers myself. I had hopes the State Board of Health could be shamed into action.

Mrs. Gregory allowed the use of her store to have eggs delivered from the suspected dealers. Case after case of eggs came there. Sold as strictly fresh eggs, examination showed them running rotten as high as seven dozen out of thirty.

Put Keeper in Store.

Three of the big dealers in rotten eggs I got evidence against were:

Morris Brown of No. 103 Fulton street, Boston.

The Standard Egg Company of No. 111 South Market street, Boston.

The Boston Egg Company of No. 143 Fulton street, Boston.

Although the attention of the State Board of Health was specifically called to these cases and I offered to supply evidence against the egg dealers, nothing has ever come of it.

Suddenly, on the morning of November 3, a stranger walked into the People's Store. He explained he had been put in there as a keeper. He said he was acting on attachments for debt filed by Morris Brown, the Boston Egg Company and the Standard Egg Company.

The entire amount owed these three firms was but $145, such a bill as any reputable storekeeper runs every day of his life working on credit. You know how the average buyer looks upon a store where a keeper is put in. Something about a keeper breeds distrust.

Mrs. Gregory's customers, unaware of the real reason for the keeper, gradually fell off in trade. Receipts dwindled. Mrs. Gregory was obliged to close the store.

Her troubles, however, with the rotten egg men did not end there. More litigation resulted. Lawyers had to be hired and paid. And all the while Mrs. Gregory and her husband were without any money coming in.

Business Is Business.

Mrs. Gregory could not take up any other kind of work. Mr. Gregory was unable to find work. Their business was ruined, their way of making a living taken away.

I wonder if these three rotten egg dealers have acted so suddenly with their other debtors? Evidently not. For Morris Brown is credited with making more than $1,000 a week in the egg business.

One thousand dollars a week profit selling eggs. And I found in one case of thirty dozen bought from him September 11 seven dozen rots and spoils.

To put it another way, Morris Brown sold in a case of eggs, sold as fresh eggs, seven dozen rotten eggs.

Seven dozen carriers of ptomaines, which were enough to poison eighty-four citizens of Malden, whether invalids or well people.

One thousand dollars a week profit selling rotten eggs.

Mrs. Gregory, by complaining to me, endangered some of that profit.

We have an excellent State Board of Health. Its activity is wonderful.

And business is business.

GARDEN GOWN SENSATION OF OPERA HOUSE

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Mary Garden donned an X-ray gown in the performance of "Tosca" last night. It was a wonderful creation, just received from Worth in Paris, and it was the nearest thing to nothing that has yet been worn upon the stage of the Boston Opera House.

The frankness with which this gown revealed the diva's figure in the second act of the opera was startling enough, but when Miss Mary stepped between the audience and a strong light representing the rising sun, in the final scene—well, it was a good thing that the drop curtain fell immediately.

On the way out everybody was talking about the Garden gown, and the Garden figure. It seemed to eclipse in importance a very remarkable performance of "Tosca," perhaps the most interesting ever given in this city.

Mary Garden's Tosca has become superb. Her voice, so often criticised, was last night in wonderful condition. She sang the music as it should be sung, with fine, round, rich high notes. She was quite equal to the demands of the "vissi d'arte," and the duet in the last act.

She still takes liberties with Puccini's recitative, and she persists in singing in French, although this is the second season that she has been appearing as Tosca in Italian performances, and she really ought to learn the role in Italian, but these are only minor defects in a performance of great power.

She has now sung Tosca many times with Vanni Marcoux. They have arranged a second act that is soul stirring. Marcoux is entitled to much of the credit for this, because he also is a great actor.

Bernhardt herself never mined better the emotions of Tosca in the arms of Scarpia, or, at the moment when she discovered the knife which gave her the means to escape from her shameful bargain, than Garden last night.

Marcoux's Scarpia is the same brilliant interpretation we know so well. He sings with all the power of a great soul. What a pity that the quality of his voice is not more agreeable.

Is Giovanni Martinelli was revealed a Mario Cavaradossi as distinguished as the Scarpia and Tosca. This young tenor comes from the Metropolitan Opera House. He is the favorite in London and Milan, and is undoubtedly going to be very popular in America. He is attractive in features, manly in bearing, and his voice is of exceptional quality. It is full, rich and a pure tenor of the robust type, even from top to bottom, with fine, ringing, high tones. His singing of the aria and in the duet of the last act was admirable in every respect.

Moranzoni conducted in a manner to awaken enthusiasm. The way in which the orchestra intones the phrases of Puccini and mounts to his climaxes is wonderful. I am not sure that "Tosca," under the baton of Moranzoni is not the very finest accomplishment of this orchestra. The chorus singing in the first act was excellent.

MISS ALICE PAUL, "militant maid," who plans to "stir up things" at the National Suffrage Convention at Washington.

SUFFRAGISTS CONVENE TODAY IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Firm in their belief that another year will see Congress adopt for ratification by the States a new amendment to the Constitution giving women the right to vote, the forty-fifth annual convention of the National Suffrage Association opened here today.

Visits to President Wilson, hearings before the Congressional committees on constitutional amendments to enfranchise women, addresses by Senators and Representatives and such leaders of the cause of suffrage as Miss Jane Addams, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, Senator Helen Ring Robinson of Colorado, Mrs. Medill McCormick, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, Mrs. Ella S. Stuart and Katherine Waugh McCullough, will feature a week of meetings.

Miss Alice Paul is one of the conspicuous figures of the convention. Strongly militant in her ideas, she believes the only way to obtain votes for women here is to have an amendment to the Federal Constitution passed. Her home is in Moorestown, N. J.

Miss Paul affectionately known to her suffragist friends, as "the militant maid," likewise may stir up a little battle with her Federal amendment plan. Miss Paul never has been known to turn her back on a fight when principles championed by her were at stake.

She served a term in England and went on a hunger strike after having thrown a stone through a window of the Guildhall while the Lord Mayor of London was dining.

The convention will also deal with the internal affairs of the organization, plans for filling the war chest, new campaigns and making of converts. It probably will be the most important suffrage gathering ever held in the capital. Suffrage leaders chose this time for the rally because they felt the convening of Congress and President Wilson's delivery of his first annual message was a phychological moment for a concentrated strike for votes.

Woman Says Texas Ex-Senator's Son Serves for Bigamy.

Sarah Augusta Campbell of Boston is seeking in the Superior Court to annul her marriage to Victor Marvin Smoot, son of former State Senator Smoot of Texas, who, she says, is at the prison camp and hospital at Rutland. He was sentenced to Deer Island for bigamy.

Chipman Safe in Arctic Wreck

Friends Confident Explorer Escaped from Fated Boat.

Dispatches from Nome, Alaska, today told of the wrecking of the power schooner Mary Sachs, one of the auxiliary boats with the Arctic expedition headed by Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the former Harvard instructor and discoverer of the "blonde Eskimos." Boston is particularly interested in the dispatch as the Mary Sachs was in charge of Kenneth G. Chipman, a Tech graduate who accompanied the exploring party as expert topographer.

As no mention was made of any loss of life in the wreck of the schooner, Boston friends of young Chipman declared he and the rest of the party aboard the schooner must have escaped.

WHAT WILL CURE MY BACK?

Common sense will do more to cure backache than anything else. "Twill tell you whether the kidneys are sore, swollen and aching. It will tell you in that case that there is no use trying to cure it with a plaster. If you suffer from irregular kidney action, proof that there is kidney trouble is complete. Then common sense will tell you to use Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended special kidney remedy.

A BOSTONIAN SAYS—

John E. Sweeney, 46 Tufts St., Medford, Boston, Mass., says: "I suffered from backache. It took the vim out of me and made me miserable. Any exertion was enough to cause a bad attack of backache. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me quickly. I have had little or no trouble since."

LARGEST FOOTBALL CROWD IN HISTORY EXPECTED TO WITNESS GAME BETWEEN 'SERVICE' MEN TODAY

BOSTON AMERICAN SPORTING NEWS

"BIG BILL" EDWARDS SAYS ARMY'S ONLY CHANCE LIES IN USE OF WIDE OPEN GAME

CADET CHANCES LIE IN USE OF WIDE OPEN GAME

By BIG BILL EDWARDS.

New York's Street Cleaning Commissioner and former Princeton gridiron star.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Both the Army and Navy teams are well pleased with the Polo Grounds, on which they will have to play today. All the men seemed to get a good foothold on the excellent gridiron especially prepared for this game.

Both teams are anxious for a clear sky today. If it rains the Navy team will doubtless be benefited by it, as they have planned a rushing game.

I saw both teams at the Brush Stadium yesterday afternoon. They are great, powerful teams and ready to fight for football supremacy this afternoon. Daly seemed determined that the Army was going to give the Navy the hardest game ever given a Navy team. He made no predictions, but there is a strong feeling among the Army that the Annapolis boys are overconfident and a surprise is in store for them this afternoon. The Army team appeared in good condition and went through its signals with lots of dash.

Daly May Outwit Navy.

Daly may outwit the Navy after all. His tems is expected to open up with an offensive and make many forward passes.

Gilchrist is the great captain and the great player of the Navy team.

Just watch his aggressive, spirited play today. He is the life of his team. He knows every detail of the game. He is excellent in receiving the forward pass, fast going down the field, tackles hard and fiercely and uses excellent judgment.

The Navy has a star backfield. Nichols is the best quarterback ever produced at the Naval Academy and runs well in the open field. Failing, Harrison and McHenry make up the remainder of the backfield.

McHenry is considered one of the best backs in the country today. His work will be watched carefully, as he is All-American type. He weighs 180 pounds and makes the forward pass well.

"I Expect Navy to Win."

I expect the Navy to win. It has a wonderful team. All averages 184 pounds to a man, while the Army averages 170.

No matter what the record of the two teams is when the final game comes on, a team has as good a chance as the other.

The Army men feel that they will surprise the Navy in spots.

If Daly opens up wide with quick kicks and runs and forward passes the Navy may be defeated.

Jack McMasters, the veteran trainer, said today the Navy team is the best one he has ever trained, and he will be the most disappointed man in the world if they do not win.

The Army has been coached by Army and Harvard men, while the Navy has had its own graduates, assisted by Yale men.

Army Aeroplane May Fly Above Grounds

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—An army aeroplane decorated with army flags may be seen above the Polo Grounds prior to the football game between West Point and Annapolis today. Sergeant Samuel Katzman of the Artillery Corps at West Point said that he had received permission from the military and football authorities to make the flight. Sergeant Katzman announced that he would start from Governor's Island some time before the game begins, weather permitting. He left here last night for Nyack, N. Y., intending to fly from there to Governor's Island this morning.

President Wilson to See Army-Navy Play

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—President Wilson will witness the Army-Navy game with members of his family and Cabinet. He will return to Washington late tonight. During the game he will divide his time equally between the Army and Navy sides of the field. It was announced that he will witness the first half of the game from Box 29 on the Army side of the field and during the intermission will cross to the Middles' stand, where Boxes 189, 191 and 192 have been set aside for his party.

POLO GROUNDS, New York, Nov. 20.—The ancient Colisseum on a Roman holiday could not have presented a more imposing sight than the Polo Grounds today. Over 45,000 persons assembled to witness the annual gridiron struggle between West Point and Anapolis.

Eleven determined young men from each school meet face to face for the honor of their particular branch of the military service. The Navy team was a 10 to 7 favorite. President Wilson gave notice that he would be present.

The Army-Navy game is fraught with interest, not only because the Cadets and Middies usually furnish as good a band of football as is displayed in the East, but also because of the distinguished persons among the spectators. Generals, admirals, captains, majors, lieutenants and ensigns, most of them graduates from one or the other of the two schools, have journeyed to New York. It can be truthfully said that at least one-third of official Washington turns out for the Army-Navy game.

Plenty of Lung Capacity.

The cadets, tightly buttoned in their gray overcoats, occupy one side of the field, while the middies, in their dark blue great coats, are seated on the other. A preliminary contest in cheering is going on between the two, as if to prove that Uncle Sam need not worry about the lung capacity of the future generals and admirals.

The Army-Navy game would not be complete without the Navy goat and the Army mule. These mascots followed the cadets and middies as they marched on the field behind their bands, the mule squaring away into position for a kick at the goat and the goat letting out a bat and manoeuvering out of the danger zone. The spirit of rivalry seems to have permeated even these two.

The most of the newspaper men on the grounds hazarded an intelligent guess that the Navy would carry off the victory. Just how the members of the two corps really feel about it is not known. Neither the Cadets nor the Middies are supposed to have made up any bets on the result, at least not officially, as betting on the game was tabooed several years ago. However, rules were made to be broken, and it was a safe bet that several cadets and several middies, according to the result, will be many sinaleons richer after the game is done. Where there is a will there is a way.

The lines, with the exception of the guards, looked to be of equal calibre. The Navy guards, however, seemed to be superior to those of the Army. In the backfield, the shade of superiority had to go to the Navy. Also the Navy team outweighed that of the Army.

These things would seem to indicate an easy victory for the Navy, but then football is football, and in no sport can so many strange things happen. According to the "dope" the Navy should win, but those twenty-two men were not going to play according to the "dope" or fighting clan but an inner determination to lick the stuffing out of the other fellow. Altogether the game promised to be a first-class scrap.

Have Fought Since 1890.

The Navy has been meeting the Army on the field of battle since 1890. No games were played between the years of 1894 and 1898, and the game in 1909 was called off on account of the death of Cadet Bryan. With these exceptions the struggle has been an annual affair. So far seventeen games have been played. The Navy has won nine and the Army seven and one was a tie.

If the Navy wins today, it will have to its credit a record equal to that of the Army, namely a string of four victories in succession.

Last year, Brown booted the ball over the bar twice, giving the Navy the only six points scored in the game. In 1910 and 1911 the great Dalton kicked a field goal each year, winning for the Navy.

Army Has the Most Points.

The Army rolled up its string of victories for the four years beginning with 1901. In 1903 the Army made the highest score of the series, defeating the Navy 40 to 5. The first game in 1890, when the Navy bent the Army 24 to 0, gave the Navy the largest score it had yet secured. In fact, although the Navy has two more games to its credit than has the Army, the latter has a higher number of total points scored in all. The Army has rolled up 160 points to the Navy's 150. This includes the 6 to 6 tie in 1905.

The Navy has come through the present season with a perfect string of victories, while West Point has one defeat chalked up against it. Notre Dame having defeated the cadets in the hardest game of the West Point schedule.

Washington May Stage Future Games Between "Service"

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—That the Army-Navy football game will be played in Washington in the future now seems assured. Several prominent officers of both branches of the service have been conferring this week with President Minor of the Washington American League Baseball Club, and an agreement has practically been reached whereby the club will agree to handle the game for the next three years. Extra stands will be put up at the ball park and every arrangement for the handling of 40,000 persons will be made. Before agreeing to handle the game the baseball club officials will insist that a three-year contract be entered into.

'Doc' White Released by Chicago Club

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Harry Grabinet, secretary of the Chicago club of the American Baseball League, has notified "Doc" White of the Chicago club that he had been released to the Venice, Cal., club.

White made professional arrangements several weeks ago to join the Venice club if he could get his release from the American League.

White, it is understood, is to fill in the 1914 season as a player and assume charge of the club as manager in 1915. He has played in the American League since 1902.

Joe Tinker May Return to the Cubs

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Joe Tinker, deposed manager of the Cincinnati baseball team, called on Manager Evers of the Chicago Nationals, and after a conference said he knew of no place where he would rather play than in Chicago. No terms were discussed, and until President Murphy of the Chicago club returns from Europe no negotiations can be started between the local organization and the Cincinnati club regarding the transfer of Tinker.

National League Meeting December 7

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—President Lynch of the National League of Professional Baseball Clubs has sent notices to all presidents of the league clubs that the annual meeting of the league would be held in this city on Tuesday, December 9, at 2 p. m. A meeting of the board of directors will be convened at noon of the same day.

45,000 WILL WITNESS POLO GROUNDS CLASH

By DAMON RUNYON.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—"Oh, Benny Havens, oh,
Oh, Benny Havens, oh.
We'll sing our reminiscences
Of Benny Havens, oh."

If you are one of the lucky forty-five thousand out at the Polo Grounds this afternoon you will hear it many a time before the sun goes down on the football fighting lines of the "Service" as they sprawl about the famous field in their annual gridiron grapple, assuming that there is any sun, which seems doubtful at this writing.

You'll hear, too, the chant of the Navy from the gold and blue battalions of our future deep water fighters, who sing:

"Stand Navy down the field Sails set to the sky"—

and so forth and so forth.

Quite a Musical Melee.

There are only six songs and eight yells in the Navy repertoire and nine songs and eight yells on the Army side, which indicates that this is going to be quite a musical melee. If you are one of the lucky forty-five thousand you will hear them all, with band accompaniment.

Most likely you will not be one of the lucky forty-five thousand unless you have had a "service" pull of some kind, or are willing to pay $75 for a pair of the few seats in possession of the speculators. The choice seats are still in the hands of the distinguished persons who have been mentioned from time to time in these columns and there was no sign of them yielding up the tickets to anyone less distinguished than themselves —this forenoon.

Blase old Broadway just awoke yesterday to the fact that there is something doing up at the Polo Grounds today. There had been no particular effort to keep the matter secret, of course, and Broadway had heard rumors about from time to time during the past few weeks, but had not given it much of a "tumble," as they say in "Broadwayese."

Wilson Will Forget Huerta.

President Wilson will forget President Huerta for a few minutes and will sit in a box with his daughter, Miss Eleanor Wilson, and Miss Katherine Woodrow, a relative from Georgia, and Mr. and Mrs. John H. Wilson. One has to have a good paying job such as the President to get in a box, as the boxes retail at $100 each.

The other boxes will be occupied by flocks of United States Senators and Congressmen and secretaries of one thing and another.

The "hot pollot," such as Ambassadors, Congressmen, assistant secretaries, colonels, rear admirals, plain citizens with a pull and the like will sit in the stands on either side of the gridiron. The extremely plain citizens will sit at the rear end of either goal, looking East or West, as the case may be.

Sweeney May Lead Cincinnati Reds; Gaffney Is Willing

President James E. Gaffney of the Boston National League Club is willing to part with the services of Captain Bill Sweeney if the Pilgrims' second baseman can land the managership of the Cincinnati Reds. It has always been the policy of the Pilgrims' head to let a man advance himself as much as he can. So, with this in mind, the Pilgrims' head wrote to Sweeney a letter, following the release of Joe Tinker as manager of the Cincinnati Club, in which he stated that if Sweeney could come to terms with the Cincinnati Club officials he would make arrangements whereby Bill could get away from Boston without any trouble. Sweeney has tried to land the Cincinnati to several times. President Herrmann of the Reds is strong for Sweeney, and it is believed that when he learns of the contents of Gaffney's letter he will go after the services of the Boston player.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

WHEN the so-called spitball came into prominence eight or nine years ago, all of the star pitchers of that period learned to pitch it in practice, but nearly all of them decided to have nothing to do with it for fear that constant use of the spitball would have a bad effect on their pitching arm. Only a very few of the best men of the day took up the new-fangled delivery. Cy Young was one of those who would not use the spitball. Christie Mathewson was another. Chief Bender, Mordecai Brown, Rube Waddell and other stars turned it down.

On the other hand, the spitball was the making of several pitchers who would have long ago been relegated to the minors except that they became very adept in using it, and it proved so effective for them that they cut out all other deliveries from their repertoire. Among these may be mentioned Big Ed Walsh, of the White Sox, and Russell Ford of the New York Americans. Now, however, good judges say these two men have ruined their arms by constant use of the spitball. Walsh was of practically of no use to the Chicago team last season, while Ford won very few games for New York. Walter Johnson, the great Washington shabman, blames the spitball for the downfall of these two noted pitchers. He says:

"The spitball is a novelty, I'll admit, but it rolls a pitcher's arm to time. If Ed Walsh, for instance, had never used the spitball he would have had no trouble with his wing. The same applies to Russell Ford, who seems to have lost his effectiveness last season.

"The pitching in the last world's series was devoid of new wrinkles. Bender and Plank depended almost entirely on speed and curves. Bender mixed in a slow ball now and then, which had the Giants swinging at nothing. Bush had a jump ball, which was nothing more than the time-honored inshoot, delivered so that it would pass close to the upper part of the body. Mathewson's fadeaway, so-called, was a drop ball with an out curve, delivered so that it would shoot over the waist.

"You can puzzle the best batsman by sending up a different kind of ball each time. Then he doesn't know what to expect and loses himself for a healthy swing. In the long run, however, speed counts when you put the ball over the plate without delay and can get the batsmen in the hole as quickly as possible."

THERE was great rejoicing in St. Louis the other day. When the official fielding averages of the American League were published, it was found that the Browns were second in club fielding, being right behind the Athletics in this respect. Well, if the citizens of St. Louis can derive any pleasure from the figures, let them have it.

But, of course there was a case where fielding figures are worthless as showing the true value of a ball club, the figures which so please the citizens of St. Louis are the ones. While the Browns finished second in fielding, they finished in last place in the league race.

Of all the fielding statistics published by the American League, there is only one position where the figures would seem to agree in any way with the real value of the players. That position is shortstop. Henry Wagner, of the Red Sox, leads the shortstops. He may not be the best shortstop in the American League, but he is pretty close to it. Opinions were given Wagner and Barry of the Athletics. At any rate they are near together, with McBride and Bush not far behind. These four are well bunched in the averages, which shows that the shortstop of the league run close to official form.

The last school football game of the season will be played at the Everett High School Athletic Field this afternoon when the Everett eleven, considered the best team in schoolboy ranks in the State, will try conclusions with the Lafayette High School of Buffalo, New York State champions. The game will start at 2 o'clock. The winner will claim the schoolboy football championship of the East.

Although Everett ruled a favorite this morning, the Suburban League champions realized that they had a hard battle on their hands. The Buffalo boys have made an enviable record. No comparison can be drawn on the relative strength of the two teams, and the anxious followers of both teams will have to wait for the result.

Everett will outweigh its opponents several pounds to a man and this will undoubtedly count in the long run. Lafayette will depend on the use of the open game. This style of play has been its constant ground gainer all season and Coach Harry Kerr expects it to work effectively against Everett today. The Everett boys fell badly before the dazzling forward pass employed by the Oak Park High school of Chicago at the Fenway Park last year, but that game taught them a lesson and they are better coached for such a contest today.

Both elevens are pretty well used up after their contests on Thursday, but expect to put up their best game today.

Alberts and Chick Disagree on Weight

The proposed bout between Joe Chick of Gloucester and "Kid" Alberts of New York, which Jack Doherty would like to stage before Matchless Park in the air. Alberts insists that the weight for the match be 145 pounds ringside, while Chick will not agree to make lower than 145 pounds at 5 o'clock on the day of the contest. The proposed whirl has aroused considerable interest throughout New England and if these two men are finally matched the "fuss" should witness a fast and spirited whirl.

Seven hundred boys from the English High School, who are unable to swim, have been enrolled for the free swimming courses at the Boston Y. M. C. A., starting December 1. Registrations are pouring in from all sides, and there is a strong probability that the 5,000 mark will be reached.

Mike Glover Seeking Bout with McFarland

South Boston Boy Gains Fame by Great Victory Over Jack Britton

By JACK CONWAY.

THERE is one young Bostonian who is not worrying about the high cost of Christmas presents. This youth does not care a great deal if the prices of the articles which delight the kiddies and their elders on Christmas Day have increased. The name of the fortunate person is Michael Glover of dear old South Boston.

A few days ago Michael was considered only a common box fighter. The busy sporting writers did not spend much time relating the deeds of the Peninsula lad.

Michael claimed the world's welterweight championship, but failed to startle the "fans." "Anybody can claim a title," they remarked and let it drop at that.

To get down to facts, Glover finally secured a tussle with one Jack Britton of Chicago. Britton is one of the young men who are seeking an engagement with Champion Willie Ritchie. He agreed to fight Glover as he thought he would win without extending himself.

Michael, however, was not brought up properly. He forgot that Danny Morgan had advertised Britton as a coming champion and was so rude as to give the Windy City boxer a severe beating. Is it any wonder that Britton declared after the "go" that Glover was an ungraceful lad? Had not the "near champion" consented to enter a ring with an almost unknown?

Therefore, why should Michael fight like a Packey McFarland? Far be it from us to enter into the controversy. All we know is that Glover made Britton look like a novice and that he is now looking up the address of F. McFarland. Perhaps he has an idea that he is also able to conquer the stockyard wizard. There is not any telling, as the sons of South Boston were born accused of lacking confidence in their own ability.

The good people of the Peninsular district, by the way, would vote for Glover if he should run for Mayor, as Britton once knocked out Eddie Murphy of South Boston, whom his friends considered unbeatable before he clashed with Morgan's protege.

RIVERS AFTER RITCHIE.

JOE RIVERS, the "Bad Mexican," did not waste much time after his victory over Leach Cross in announcing that he desired another bout with Willie Ritchie, who is permitted to sign "world's lightweight champion" after the name. Rivers is able to defeat the majority of the 135-pounders but has not any license to challenge Ritchie.

The lightweight king carries too many guns and is too game for Rivers. The Mexican fought Ritchie on the Coast last July and the champion dressed in a winner by the knockout route in ten rounds. The Mexican outfought Ritchie to the first part of the whirl, but when Ritchie mastered his opponent's style he battered him around. The ring at which Rivers finally went to the mat for the count of ten and W. W. Naughton, who "covered" the fight for the AMERICAN, stated that he showed the white feather and quit cold when the going became fast.

JOE FAVORITE ON COAST.

IT would not be a surprise to the writer, however, if Rivers should be matched to battle with Ritchie again. Both men live in California and consequently are big favorites there. Rivers was a popular idol in Southern California before he was knocked out by Ritchie but many of his friends asserted him after the poor showing against the Frisco boy. Rivers won back much of his former position by defeating Cross.

Californians have always admired Cross' fighting ability, but have never forgiven him for knocking out "Bud" Anderson. Anderson is also a native son and was being boomed for the lightweight championship when he ran into one of Cross' wild right hand blows.

The Family Cupboard

(Novelized by)

A. A. Waterbury

(From Owen Davis' play now being presented in New York by William A. Brady.—Copyright, 1913, by International News Service).

"IT'S made difference to you, just the few days since my money has been all gone. If you were to leave me now, I'd give up. I WOULDN'T WANT TO LIVE! I COULDN'T! WHAT I HAVE DONE I DID BECAUSE I THOUGHT OUR LOVE WAS BIG ENOUGH TO EXCUSE IT. IF—IF I HAVE BEEN WRONG ABOUT THAT, TOO—IF THAT IS ROTTEN, AS SORDID, AS EVERYTHING AROUND US, I'D—I'D JUST QUIT!"

But the spirit of his words fell on deaf ears—as later events would prove.

Kitty answered with petulance.

"Haven't we lived respectable? Nobody can say anything different unless they lie! What's 'sordid' about us unless it's my clothes? Oh, Ken, I've got to have ten dollars today—I've got to."

The boy was utterly thrown back on his own overstrained nature again. He was left to starve for sympathy—for understanding—left as a "better" woman—his mother, Mrs. Charles Nelson, "leader of society"—had left his father two years before. There is a clause in law that says that whoever starts a train of dangerous circumstances in motion is responsible for the results thereof. Ken did not know this clause—he had not yet begun to lay the course of the family tragedy at the door of his mother's future-seven criminal—indifference. But the hour was coming when out of his bitter knowledge of Kitty Claire he would pronounce his judgment on his mother.

"I can't get the ten," he said in the tone of a man beaten.

"Dick got a couple of seats for a vaudeville tonight. I've got to get my blue dress from the cleaners. Me! wearing cleaned dresses! Talk about sordid and rotten! You can't beat that!"

In answer to the whine in her voice, Ken answered, as sunny a struggle man before him defeated by woman's weakness has answered:

"Pll fix, Kitty."

A FRIEND IN NEED

"Tt,," exclaimed Kitty angrily. . . . Before she could go on in her accustomed of masculine failure to "provide," the little dena ex machina—the telephone—rang.

"Hello! Who's that?" asked Miss Claire hopefully.

"The room-clerk, I suppose," was the heart-wave answer. "Nobody else wants me. He said I must pay today."

The bell rang again.

"You can sit bing, can't you? My God, what's the good of an exclamation!"

"Hello—yes—oh—yes: Yes! Send him right up!"

His voice ran the gamut of fear to eagerness and finished with a sly and actful joy as he turned to Kitty and said: "It's Tom Hardigg."

"Good!"

The boy almost broke down.

"The first one of them that has come to see me this long week! The first one of my own people."

"Hurray! The luck has turned, Ken!"

"Tess—he's a good fellow. Tom always was a good fellow!"

"I'll get out. You can do better with him alone. Don't be a fool now, Ken. IT'S JUST AS EASY TO SAY A THOUSAND AS A HUNDRED IF YOU HOLD YOUR MOUTH RIGHT!"

The boy was deeply moved. Affection, home ties, never mean so much as when they are almost lost.

"It—it isn't the money—I didn't think anybody cared. It isn't the money."

"Of course, it isn't, dear—it's the notion," said Kitty smoothly. Then she hardened to practical values again—the thought of money had softened her voice to a semblance of its old sweetness. "But, Ken, a little of both helps."

Hardigg him a kiss, and let herself out of a door that led to a side corridor, while Ken let the main door open a crack, gazed anxiously down the hall, waiting for his welcome bearer of home tidings.

At first he saw Tom Hardigg in the corridor entrance—his eager welcome bubbled to his lips.

"Tom! This way! How are you, old man? I'm awfully glad to see you Tom —awfully. Jove, this is something like —not just a friend, but a brother! You haven't shaken hands yet, Tom!"

"No, I don't think I will, Kenneth."

The eager boy drew back in hurt surprise—but the scales of his sorrow were to be heaped fuller and fuller—measure upon measure. The joyously welcomed visit of Tom Hording had just begun!

"I got your letter, Kenneth. I did not mention it to Alice. I was going to throw it in my waste basket at first. Then I thought I would come."

"I am in trouble, Tom. An awful mess! We have been friends always and—"

"I won't lend you money!"

"Tom, I've got to have it!" The boy's voice was taking on a note of pleading. This was no time, he thought, for false pride.

"I couldn't if I wanted to—and I don't," said Tom, implacably.

Three Stunning Hats and How to Make Them

Aigrette, or tulle-trimmed

"CLOTHES, of course, may make the man—but since first the world began hats have made the woman, and they always will."

So runs the old song—and in truth hats do make the woman—they make or unmake her beauty, they add the final touch of smartness and becomingness to her costume, so they spoil the ensemble with a false and jarring note.

There are just a few rules that all women should master before going out on a "hatting" expedition. If you master these rules and then proceed to keep your eyes wide open in the millinery shop, you are likely to possess yourself of a hat that will belong inevitably to you—instead of becoming possessed of a hat that ought to belong either to your grandmother or to your grandchild.

Make up your mind as to the type of face you possess. Don't put a piquant little girl hat on a Burne Jones face. Get a hat that is your own type.

One side of your face is almost certain to be better than the other. Try your hat to throw the poorer side of your profile in shadow and to throw your best features in high relief.

Now if you buy some but hats that are meant for the occasions when you want to wear them—if you get good material that is simple rather than elaborate—if you choose none but colors that you can well afford to reflect down on your face—and above all, if you buy hats that fit on your head instead of perching on your hair, your millinery bill will be no becoming that you will fairly long to wear hats even at dances or in the theatre.

I am illustrating for you three very charming chapeaux—and from a study of them you may get some valuable hints for home millinery.

THE THEATRE CAP

Take, for instance, the little cap of gold net. It can be converted from a fling theatre or dancing cap to a fascinating little Winter toque by making its brim either of velvet or of fur and by giving it a substantial crown to correspond.

The woman with scanty locks, with very large features, or with a long, thin face will do well to avoid the tight banding of the brim on her forehead. But if your hair is soft and your face small featured and oval or childishly round and full, this little cap will be most becoming and color suitable to your use, perch a cunning to you. Develop it in a material low of velvet above the left eye, and you have a hat for the Winter sports.

A velvet Gainsborough

The velvet Gainsborough forms a wonderful background for almost any face Just have your shadows fall in the soft, dark place and the "picture" hat will surely make a picture of you. Feathers have a softening effect on woman's face, and so they are coming into their own again and replacing some of the "fancies" that were so suitably named.

The hat I picture for you is short of brim at the front, left side and back, and widens into a great lifted flare at the right. Here are massed any soft, becoming colored plumes, extending up to give height and drooping down to soften the line of the brim. The chin strap is of the wide velvet, matching the plumes in color.

The only rule for the chin strap is to study the rhyme of the little girl who was "horrid" when she was bad. If the line of velvet bridled under your chin it becoming it is ravishingly pretty, but unless you are quite sure that you look low of velvet above the left eye, and the little bridle makes some women look like horses and some more like donkeys.

AN AIGRETTE SUBSTITUTE

And now for my aigrette trimmed dress hat. Since aigrettes are now forbidden, you may substitute the equally soft, and cloud-like paradise, or soft loops of tulle or lace wings or mates bows.

The style of trimming here is most unusual. The upstanding front trimming and the down drooping side ornamentation give height and softness of outline. However, your truthful friend —and your only ever truthful friend—the mirror, will tell you whether to dispense with one set of trimmings, and if so, which to retain.

Never in dress are you so much an individual as when it comes to your choice of hats. Make your hat yours, make it conform first to your face, second to your purpose and third to the mode, and then it will "make the woman"—and make her lovely.

Their Married Life

Helen's First Experience at a Turkish Bath Is Most Illuminating

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

HELEN drew the sheet closer about her as they entered the hot room.

The air was stifling, and even the floor felt hot to her bare feet.

A number of women clad only in sheets were leaning back in the deck chairs that lined the wall. They were all sipping water and holding ice cloths on their heads.

The pretty attendant led Helen and Mrs. Stevens to the chairs near the end of the room, and brought them each a cup of water and a towel-wrapped piece of ice.

"Try to drink a lot of water while you're in here," advised Mrs. Stevens, "it helps to make you perspire."

As Helen rubbed her face with cold cream to protect it from the hot air she read the placarded signs which hung around the wall.

"Turkish Baths Prolong Your Youth

3 Tickets for $6.00."

"Enhance Your Charms by Weekly Visits to The Pompeian Baths."

"Well, we may look beautiful afterward, but I shouldn't say any one here looks particularly alluring now," glancing at the flushed, grease-coated faces around the room.

TRYING TO REDUCE

A stout woman, livid with the heat, sat opposite. The ice cloth lay on her head at a rakish angle, and her drenched hair hung in straggling locks. Her bare arms and feet showed crosses of fat, and the sheet did not conceal the lines of her pudgy figure.

"She's reducing," whispered Mrs. Stevens. "She's here every time I come. The time and money some of these women spend trying to reduce!"

Helen glanced down at her own slim form, outlined under the clinging sheet, and adjusted her ice cap with a sigh of content.

"Haven't we been in here long enough?" for she could hardly breathe in the heated air, and the chair seemed burning hot. "That sign says ten minutes," nodding toward a large placard.

"It Is Not Advisable to Stay in This Room Longer Than Ten or Fifteen Minutes. Consult Attendant."

"Yes, and you're not used to it. We'll go in and be packed now."

Through the swinging door Mrs. Stevens led the way into a large, mirror-lined room filled with cots. An attendant ran forward with fresh sheets and skilfully "packed" them with blankets up to their chins.

"How long do we stay here?" asked Helen, turning her head toward Mrs. Stevens, who was in the cot to her right.

"Oh, about fifteen minutes—until we perspire thoroughly."

The heat had been somewhat enervating, and not feeling inclined to talk, Helen lay there watching the bathers as they trailed in and out.

She wondered how these women would look in their clothes. Probably most of them, with the aid of corsets, rouge, false hair and modish gowns, were "smart," stylish looking women. But here in only a sheet, which did not disguise their figures, and with their scant hair twisted into a tight bun, they were very much on a par and looked alike.

"I wonder if men look as unattractive in a Turkish bath as women?" mused Helen.

"They probably look worse," laughed Mrs. Stevens.

"Have you ladies any one for your bath?" called a gleaming white figure.

"No, I want Nellie, and see if you can get Rosa for this lady."

The girl went out calling "Nellie! Rosa!" and Mrs. Stevens turned to Helen with a reassuring:

"Rosa's good and strong—she'll give you a good rub."

"Why do they have 'Stolen from the Pompeian Baths' on everything?" asked Helen suddenly, for across the edge of every sheet, towel and blanket this phrase was worked in large red letters.

"That's the one thing I don't like about this place—they're so distrustful. Who would want their old sheets and towels? It's an insult to their patrons to have that 'stolen from the Pompeian Baths' on everything. Oh, here comes Nellie now!"

NELLIE ARRIVES

A tall, well-built girl, her sheet girded around her waist and over her shoulder in the manner of all the attendants, now came up to them.

"Is this the lady who wants Rosa?" glancing toward Helen as she unwrapped Mrs. Stevens' blankets. "She'll be here in a minute, she's just giving an alcohol rub."

Helen watched Mrs. Stevens go off with Nellie, with a sudden nervousness at being left alone. This was her first experience at a Turkish bath, and she did not know just what was in store for her.

"You the lady with Mrs. Stevens?" asked a pretty, round-faced attendant, who now approached her cot. "What's your number?" as she began unwrapping the blanket.

"Two hundred and eighty-six," answered Helen, glancing at the key of her locker, suspended from the rubber ring around her wrist.

Helen's heart beat fast as she followed the girl out to the baths. The various apparatuses and hurrying white-sheeted attendants were somewhat terrifying.

"Just step in there," Rosa pushed open the door of the steam room. "I'll call you in a minute."

Helen found herself in a cloud of dense white steam. She put out her hand and took a groping step forward. There were others in the room, for she could hear their voices, and from somewhere came the roar of machinery and the loud hissing of steam.

A shuddering thought came to her of the engine room of the Titanic. She imagined it was like this as the ship went down, and she pictured the wretched stokers trying to fight their way out through the blinding steam.

Then she heard the door open and Rosa's voice calling "Ho!" When she stepped out the clear air quickly dispelled her grewsome thoughts.

Rosa now led her to one of the many scrub rooms—a marble partitioned cell with a stone bench and a stone pillow. With a small hose she turned a flood of water on the bench, pillow and floor, dispelling Helen's lurking fear that things might not be "clean."

"Now, just lie down there, ma'am. Is this your first bath?" noticing Helen's shrinking reluctance. "Oh, you'll like it when you get used to it."

Helen closed her eyes and held her breath. With astonishing vigor and energy this young woman went at her with a stiff brush that felt like a curry-comb.

THE ONSLAUGHT

"Oh, not so hard! My skin's too tender!"

"It's good for you, ma'am," consolingly. "Now, turn over, please."

Helen squirmed under the onslaught of the bristle brush. Then a moment's respite and she felt a soothing flood of warm water from the hose. Then more lathering with soap and more vigorous scrubbing.

"There, now, ma'am," as Rosa again turned on the hose. "Would you like a salt rub?"

Helen had no conception of what a salt rub meant, but she remembered a sign: "Salt Rubs Make Pink Skin."

The bristle brush alone was torture, but the bristle brush filled with coarse salt brought visions of the Spanish Inquisition when they lashed their victims and rubbed salt into their raw wounds.

"Oh, don't—please don't! I can't stand it!"

"You'll feel fine afterwards. Your skin's a little tender, but a salt rub's good for it. There now," as again came the grateful flood of warm water. "Now come out and I'll give you the hose and the spray."

Outside Helen stood in a marble recess while Rosa from the corridor shot ten feet away turned on a powerful hose. It was warm at first—but gradually it grew colder. Like most women, Helen shrank from cold water, but Rosa was merciless and kept the now icy stream turned full on her.

"Now, ma'am, the needle spray and you're through."

She turned off the hose and led Helen to a diabolical looking arrangement of coiled pipes which sent out fine sprays of water and steam. Helen shrank back with a cry.

ONLY THE SPRAY

"That's scalding! You don't expect me to stand in there?"

"Why, it's cold, ma'am! That ain't steam—that's only the spray!"

When Helen reluctantly stepped inside it was like a thousand electrets needles plying against her flesh. Yet instead of feeling cold her skin began to glow. To her amazement she really enjoyed standing in this shower of icy spray.

"There," and Rosa turned a warm sheet about her as she came out, "I know you'd like it. Now don't you want to go in the pool for a while?" leading her down the corridor to a large marble bathing pool.

Mrs. Stevens was already there, and Helen waded out toward her, shoulder deep in the clear water.

The ten minutes in the pool, then a brisk rub-down with coarse towels, and they made their way back to the dressing room. There the bath attendant gave them a vigorous alcohol rub.

When they finally came out on the street Helen's skin was aglow and her blood tingled pleasantly through her. She walked fast and took deep breaths of the clear, frosty air. Her sense of physical well-being amounted almost to exhilaration.

But the buoyancy of her mood was not wholly physical. For as she pictured the disfiguring obesity of some of the women in the baths her mind leaped joyously to the thought that she was still young and slim, and that for her a Turkish bath was a luxury and not part of a relentless "reducing regimen."

Little Bobbie's Pa

I WAS reading last nite, sed Ma, about a wunderful lake in South America that has a vast amount of precious stones & gold buried down in the bottom of it. The story sed that sum of them old sun worshipers throwd all thare diamonds & perls & gold in the lake for a kind of a sacrifice, & it told how thousands of dollars has been spent by modern adventurers trying to find the treasure at the bottom of the lake.

Did anybody find it? sed Pa.

Oh, they found a few thousand dollars' worth after they'd spent about two hundred thousand dollars trying, sed Ma, but the bottom of the lake was full of mud, about thirty feet of mud & they had to give it up.

I should think they wud, sed Pa. It must be a kind of tuff job to look for a four carat dimond in thirty feet of mud on a lake bottom.

I guess there wasent so much of a fortune put thare in the first place, sed Ma. I dount believe the peepul in them days had many dimonds. There wifes wuddent have much use for them unless they hung them around thare necks, & I dount suppose thare was any good society thare anyhow. Dimonds wuddent be much use if thare wasent good society.

But the men was wise peepul then, Jest the same, sed Pa. I suppose the husbands found these dimonds & thot it over and figgered that it wud be a whole lot better to throw them into a lake than to hang them on thare wifes. A wife looks butiful in dimonds, Pa sed, but she dont liked to do so much house work if she has many of them.

Nobody out a bilsd wud throw dimonds away like that, sed Ma.

I am not so sure, sed Pa. There are more diamonds being wore by wimmen now than in the days, sez I, a lot of them are waring them out in Reno. Our families dident buy thare wifes dimonds, Pa sed, but they married to them & quitsted with each other & lived together till they died. The most I think of it, sed Pa, the more I think of them old sun worshipers had the right dope. If I thought that giving my wife two dimonds was going to mak her discontented & want four, I wud rather throw them into thirty feet of mud or even sixty.

You are a exceptional girl, Pa sed. Look at yung Blake, that got married last yeer. He bought his wife a dimond & a perl, she calls hount crying one day beekus she cuddent have a pigeon blood ruby. So he bought her a pigeon blood ruby that cost him nearly six months income & then she wanted a emerald necklace. He had as much chanse to buy her a emerald necklace as he had to take a running broad jump across the Panama Canal, but she kept on him until they began to disagree, & now they have drifted apart. I guess yung Blake wishes right now that all the precious stones in the world were beneath a lake, sunk in the mud.

I think Ma's eyes are nicer than dimonds, were her eyes sparkl, I bold Pa.

Sumtimes sed Pa, but it deepends on how they sparkle.

HE WASN'T SO SILLY.

A young Lancashire mill worker had a mental relapse, which resulted in his being sent to the county asylum.

After he had been there a few weeks he was visited by one of his fellow-workers, who came across him in the grounds.

"Hallon, Benny!" said the visitor, "how's tha gettin' on?"

"Oh, Ah'm goin' on first-rate, thank yo," answered the afflicted one.

"Ah'm very glad to hear it, lad," said the visitor, pleasantly. "I suppose you'll be comin' back to work soon—eh?"

"Wo!" exclaimed Ben, while a look of great surprise spread over his countenance. "Leave a big house and a grand garden like this to coom back to work! Mon, dost tha think Ah'm wrang in my head?"

The Seven Mistakes of Matrimony

—NO. 7—

By DOROTHY DIX

THE seventh deadly mistake of matrimony is:

NOT TO MAKE MATRIMONY A PROFESSION.

Perhaps the greatest mistake of all, and the one that sums all the others up, consists in regarding success in marriage as an accident instead of a premeditated result.

The most mischievous idea that has ever been promulgated is that marriage is a lottery, in which everything is determined by blind chance, and in which it is a mere matter of luck whether you get a desirable life partner or an undesirable one, or are happy or miserable.

Nothing on earth is farther from the truth than this. Nowhere else does the inevitable logic of cause and effect work out so relentlessly as in the domestic relationship. Nowhere else do we so absolutely reap as we sow as in the family circle, and, given certain people and certain conditions, it is just as demonstrable that a marriage will work out well, or badly as it is that two and two make four.

The trouble with us is that we have never yet elevated matrimony to the dignity of a profession, for which we have thought it worth while to prepare. That is why we fail in the most important thing in life. No young man would expect to make a bowing success as a surgeon or a lawyer if he had never even contemplated scientific medicine or the law, yet a poor, deluded woman marries him under the impression that she is getting a first-class husband, and he himself has no doubt of his qualifications on that score.

A young woman who wants to be an opera singer devotes years of arduous labor to fitting herself to sing on the stage, but she does not spend an hour preparing herself to fill the far more difficult and complicated role of a wife and mother.

A WRONG ASSUMPTION

People seem to think that a knowledge of how to love husbands and wives comes by nature, as fingers by thought the knowledge of how to read and write did. Both assumptions are equally false. If it takes effort and perspiration, as well as inspiration, to succeed in any calling, and especially in domestic calling.

Undoubtedly the matrimonial situation would be enormously eased if men and women would approach the married life by a thorough understanding of just the elementary things. If every woman knew how to keep house and make a comfortable home when she marries instead of having to learn her trade on her husband, and if every man could be brought to realize before marriage just how much support a wife has a right to expect, a young couple would start out with an infinitely better chance for happiness than they have where the wife gets hysterical over her inability to cook a meal that isn't a menace to life itself, and where the husband is in a perpetual growl when it dawns on him that matrimony is conducted on a cash basis, instead of the hot air currency of courtship.

The hope of the future is for intelligent people to regard marriage as a profession that is worthy of profound study, and in which it is as much a disgrace to fail as it is in the practice of any other profession.

A SECRET

It is literally true that almost any marriage could be made happy, or at least endurable, if either husband or wife would pursue the method that he or she would in trying to attain success in any profession or business, and all that would be necessary to do this would be to use the same tactics that are used in the practice of business or the professions.

Take the matter of the husband's and wife's relationship. That is merely a partnership, and all that any married couple need to achieve ideal happiness is just to rise to the point where they can treat each other as two men in business together do. Find a husband and wife who work together with the same interest in view, who are climbing up together, who share equally in the profits of their joint labors, who talk things over together and have an equal voice in deciding things, yet who allow each other individual capacity personal liberty, and you have got a husband and wife whose domestic felicity is strong enough to draw money on at the bank.

Furthermore, a man who has any intelligence tries to get along with the people with whom he deals. If he was always quarreling with the partner he would know that the house was bound to come to disaster. He would be aware that if he did not exercise tact and diplomacy toward his clients that it was a mere matter of time until the sheriff sold him out. Women know these things too, and there is nobody who is more long suffering, and patient, and filled with forebearance than the business or professional woman who has to cajole the men above her in order to hold down her job.

JUST SUPPOSE

Suppose these men and women, who are as pliable and suave in order to succeed in their business should apply an equal amount of diplomacy at home; suppose these men and women, who are so careful to observe the little courtesies of their customers, would be as sinfully indistempting the little peculiarities of their husbands and wives, wouldn't they make matrimony as great a success as they do law, or medicine, or the grocery business?

You, verily. We quarrel with those with whom we have to live, and we do not think it worth while to keep the peace. We say brutal things to them because there is no money in the pocket for being polite. We wound them in their tender sensibilities because they can't get a divorce. We carry from our marriage a failure because we are too ignorant and lazy and careless to make it a success.

And the shame is on our own heads. It ought to be just as much a reflection upon any man's or woman's ability to be a bankrupt in domestic happiness as a bankrupt in business. And it will be when we take matrimony out of the amateur class and put it in the professional.

BUSINESS AND FINANCIAL NEWS EDITED BY EXPERTS

Latest in Today's Stock Markets

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor.

Stocks shaded today during a session in which conditions offering prices were unchanged and public interest was entirely lacking. Business was dull at the opening and the price range very narrow. There was the same lack of demand and no selling pressure of importance. Transactions were almost exclusively professional. At the end of the first hour most issues were lower. In the second there was more trading than in the rule during the last half of a week-end session, but it was along the lines which have been followed for a week. Share transactions in New York totaled about 75,000. Business for the week—which comprised five market days only—was under 525,000 shares.

In Boston at the end, New Haven was unchanged and Boston & Maine off 2 at 50. During the morning it had sold at 49½, its low record. Boston Elevated was down ½, and United Fruit up ¼, the latter not having held all of its first hour advance. American Telephone was up a trifle. Copper were weak. Declines included Calumet & Arizona ½, North Butte ¾, Quincy 2, Copper Range ⅝, Keweenaw 1, Calumet & Hecla 10 and Shattuck-Arizona ⅝.

New York Issues Averaged Lower.

In the New York market, which opened quietly, the trend was downward from the beginning. Canadian Pacific weakened early, despite the showing of earnings for October. It sagged a point within a few minutes as the result of a drive. But it soon recovered and at the close was ⅝ higher than at the end on Friday. Steel closed unchanged. Declines included Union Pacific ⅝, Reading ⅝, American Can ⅝, Amalgamated Copper ⅝, and Missouri Pacific ⅝.

The New York bank statement for today was as follows: Average statement— Excess cash reserve, $5,847,950; a decrease of $10,720,250; loans, increase, $4,850,000; specie, decrease, $11,522,000; legal tenders, decrease, $1,185,000; net deposits, decrease, $8,983,000; circulation, decrease, $59,000. Actual statement— Loans, decrease, $146,116,000; specie, decrease, $21,455,000; legal tenders, decrease, $877,000; net deposits, decrease, $37,824,000; reserve, decrease, $12,334,500.

Bankers Restricting Credit?

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, who is supposed to have some grievance against Wall Street because of his experience as a tunnel builder, has heard that business all over the country is being lagged through banks refusing to handle commercial paper in usual quantities. It is asserted that some bankers are advising others to keep assets as liquid as possible in order that banks may be able to meet the requirements of the new currency law.

A few months ago Wall Street advices concerning note issues would happen when in easier time to move crops, and there were whispers that there might be a panic. Secretary McAdoo squelched all that by offering to deposit $50,000,000 of United States treasury funds in Southern and Western banks. This proved sufficient to keep money rates down, and it has been years since harvests were handled with so little financial strain.

Now, Mr. McAdoo is prepared to handle any such situation as might exist if banks are putting any ban upon commercial paper. He has made it known that the Treasury Department will not hesitate to use its resources in aiding banks to comply with new currency requirements. They will be allowed to hold on to crop-moving money for thirty days longer, and he is of the opinion that banks can continue to grant accommodations to business men in the usual way. Furthermore, when the new currency system is being put into operation the Treasury Department will be in a helpful mood in general.

Bad Business Is Poor Politics.

Mr. McAdoo conferred with President Wilson before he informed business men and bankers of his attitude, so it is assumed that he has all the backing of both the White House can give. The curtailment of business is giving Democratic leaders concern. It is just such Republican leaders asserted would follow tariff revision. Hard times is supposed to greatly diminish the chance of the re-election of any President. The Democratic party got into power on pledges to cut down the cost of living and to provide prosperity for the country. All this is going to be pointed out by Republican spellbinders during the congressional campaign next Fall and in later campaigns. The Wilson administration is alive to the necessity of "making good." Business depression is causing great uneasiness at Washington.

Currency Situation Is Urgent.

The business situation is such that the administration program looks to currency legislation as urgent. The new system will create some confusion and several provisions likely to become law will make it difficult or irksome for all banks to comply. So party leaders who have charge of the bill and the President want to get through a period of stress as soon as possible. There is no question but that the present uncertainty is bad for business as well as for the stock market.

This is one reason why it is intended by the caucus proceedings now going on to bind every Democratic senator to support of the administration bill and to line the party up as solidly as possible against the opposition. The President will exert every effort to get a currency bill passed within a few weeks. It will be in every material sense the one reported by six Democrats on the banking committee.

Financial News in Brief.

The advance in Montreal exchange may continue until it shuts off the gold movement from New York to Canada. The rate began going up yesterday. December dividend and interest disbursements will aggregate about $113,000,000.

October railroad figures include an increase of $15,994 in net revenue for Illinois Central, a decrease of $285,612 in net operating revenue for Boston & Maine, a decrease of $2,855,612 in net earnings for the National Railways of Mexico and an increase of $541,971 in the net earnings of Canadian Pacific.

HOLDING FIRMS MUST END, PLEA OF UNTERMYER

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 29.—"Destroy holding companies. Give minority stockholders representation in the directorates of their corporations. Place railroad organizations under the control of the Interstate Commerce Commission instead of the courts." Samuel Untermyer, chief counsel of the Pujo Committee investigating the Money Trust, declared, outlining a program to restore confidence in the industries of the United States, in a speech before the Economic Club.

He said: "A halt should be called upon further governmental investigations into the past crimes in the looting of corporations; the state should be held on to crop-moving money for thirty days longer, and he is of the opinion that banks can continue to grant accommodations to business men in the usual way. Furthermore, when the new currency system is being put into operation the Treasury Department will be in a helpful mood in general.

AFTER-HOLIDAY TRADE RULES VERY STRONG

After-Thanksgiving trade rules unusually strong in Boston today, with heavy orders either placed or in near view among the big wholesale houses, notwithstanding the fear previously entertained by traders that the new tariff would smash business for months to come.

The slight depression of a few weeks past seems to have run its course, with the coming of seasonable weather. Small merchants are looking ahead to a good Winter trade, and preparing for it. The country business men also are in the market to buy goods, for future delivery. In the greater number of instances, and in numerous lines of trade, the outlook for continued prosperity is exceedingly bright.

One of the most infallible signs of all-around conditions in the general market is found in the large call for novelties, small wares, hosiery, underwear and other notions, by the retail trade since the holiday.

"We haven't the slightest complaint to make," Hamilton Foster of Jordan, Marsh & Co., on Harrison avenue today, when asked how he found trade after the holiday.

Equally optimistic reports came from manufacturing circles, especially from the cotton mills. The final decision of the Dartmouth Manufacturing Co. of New Bedford, to provide shareholders with $400,000 cash with which to pay for half the new $800,000 capital stock increase—which is equivalent to the declaration of 33 1-3 per cent. stock dividend —directs attention again to the remarkable earnings of this goods mill.

Since 1905, Dartmouth has made the following distributions:

In 1905, 20 per cent.; 1906, 26 per cent.; 1907, 60 per cent.; 1908, 06 per cent.; 1909, 12 per cent. and 100 per cent. stock; 1910, 16 per cent.; 1911, 16 per cent.; 1912, 16 per cent.; 1913, 16 per cent. and 33 1-3 per cent. cash.

Since 1907 Dartmouth has, therefore, paid out in cash $1,704,000. In addition it has paid a 100 per cent. stock dividend and a 33 1-3 per cent. stock dividend amounting to $1,400,000 and is now calling on stockholders for $400,000 new capital.

It is probable that the new Dartmouth stock paying 10 per cent. will sell at $140 and on this new basis the additional $1,400,000 capital has a selling value of $1,960,000. Deducting from this the $400,000 paid in, Dartmouth stockholders have received $1,560,000 in value besides cash dividends.

Germans Now Favor Panama-Pacific Fair

Strong Sentiment for Appropriation Develops in Party Meetings.

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—The interest shown by the Reichstag in the Panama-Pacific Exposition is rapidly shaping itself into more concrete form, and several of the political parties have taken up the question of an appropriation at party meetings.

The feeling at these meetings was so favorable that the introduction of a resolution requesting sufficient money from the government in the supplementary budget is confidently expected.

Scene of Phone Trust Suit to Be Baltimore

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—Attorneys and officials interested in the government anti-trust suit against the American Telephone and Telegraph Company prepared today to leave for Baltimore, where the hearing of evidence will again be taken up Tuesday. The evidence of all the Western independent telephone companies has been taken here.

To Announce N. H. Dividend Next Month

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The executive committee of the New York, New Haven & Hartford did not at its last meeting discuss the dividend, Mr. Elliott said. Definite announcement on that point is expected in the first week in January.

Plans for divesting subsidiary companies were considered.

U. S. Trade Agents for South America

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—In order to advance trade between the United States and South America, with the opening of the Panama Canal, Secretary Redfield has included in his estimates to be submitted to Congress next month an appropriation for $100,000 for use in sending trade agents through all South America.

British View of U. S. Tariff Revision

By BOERSIANER.

As to the tariff, an English, and therefore a congenitally inimical opinion may be quoted, that of the ironmonger of London:

"The question whether the alterations in the United States iron and steel duty will stimulate exports from this country or from the continent of Europe is one of considerable interest. If such a tariff as has been issued in the United States had been enacted twenty-five or thirty years ago there can be no doubt that it would have been of great importance to British trade, but the conditions are now entirely changed.

"The United States then made only about 10 per cent. of the world's iron and steel, whereas now they make about 50 per cent. They have passed through the period when they could only work under the protection of a prohibitive customs tariff, and they would now be well able to abolish duties altogether if they desired to do so. Take, for instance, the reduction in duty on steel bars from 12 per cent. to 5 per cent.

"The price of steel bars in the United States is at the moment lower than in this country, and has been so for about two years. The reduction may be said of barrels, rails, plates and other materials of this class; and yet when the old tariff was set up American manufactures of this kind were twice as dear as those of Europe. It is fairly obvious, therefore, that no imports from this side are likely to be possible as a result of these particular reductions in the United States tariff. The main export business in iron from Great Britain to the United States consists of special classes of pig iron, which, in 1912, is given as $2,153,000.

"Our tin plate exports to the States, which were not so long ago of great importance, have dwindled to about $250,000 worth annually. The duty on tin plate has been reduced from about 32 per cent. to 15 per cent., and it is possible that some little increase in business may result, but no great expansion may be expected. The fact is that the American iron and steel trade is preparing, not to admit foreign competition, but to invade the outside markets of the world, and it will probably be enabled to do this by the cheapening of the costs of production through the lowering of the duties upon goods generally, and the consequent reduction in the cost of living in the States."

American Free Meat Tariff Stirs London

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Alarm is expressed here over the effect of the tariff opening the American ports to free meat. The National Home Produce Association will consider the question. Eighteen thousand quarters of beef intended for English consumption has been sent to New York recently.

Religious Notices.

L. B. S. A.—"The Day of Judgment"; widely varied and inconsistent have been the conclusions of the ablest minds on the subject as presented or treated in the Scriptures; the speaker maintains it is an unwarranted thing to say many minds that it is a question of great perplexity to the masses. This subject will be discussed in a judgment day, if it is true, as generally taught and believed, at the Second Advent—meaning each individual member of the human race is required to appear before God after death at the time of death. The Bible is its own interpreter, and therefore, before attempting to explain it, it is necessary to find out what it means by the words used. Lord's Day, Sunday, next Dec. 1, 3 p. m. Those Poor Navajo Indian Ladies—

They're Very Much Like Our White Anti-Suffragettes. They Want to Be Bossed, as Good Squaws Should Be

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company

Perhaps you have read that the Navajo Indians are trotting around in a circle, trying to stir up in themselves a spirit of battle.

A Navajo ordinarily is not fierce. He makes his queer blankets—widely imitated by those who make them much better and cheaper.

He fears almost everything that walks, creeps or flies.

But he wishes now that he could make up his mind to fight Uncle Sam—BECAUSE UNCLE SAM SAYS A NAVAJO OUGHT TO HAVE ONLY ONE WIFE AT A TIME.

Whoever has seen ONE Navajo wife would think that would be plenty.

But the Navajos say they have always been used to several Navajo ladies for wives. They don't want to stop.

They are highly indignant now because Uncle Sam has arrested some of them for refusing to obey the law and give up bigamy.

The interesting thing is the fact that while the Navajo gentlemen, in their three dollar trousers and brightly colored blankets, stamp their feet and practice war songs, THE NAVAJO LADIES ENCOURAGE THEM AND ARE WITH THEM HEART AND SOUL.

Very much like a Navajo lady insisting on bigamy is a white anti-suffragette insisting that she shall be treated like an Indian, an idiot or a dog and forbidden to vote.

The Navajo lady says: "I have always been a bigamist person or the wife of a bigamist person. And I don't want any interference from the outside. I'll encourage my poor, weak-backed husband to fight if Uncle Sam won't let him have as many wives as he can get."

And the white anti-suffragette, poor, old, clinging thing, usually past fifty years of age, too old to take in a new idea, just silly enough to depend upon masculine admiration as her only nourishment says: "I have always been treated like an Indian or an idiot and told that I could not vote.

"I glory in my inferiority. I want to roll my eyes up at some superior man with fine whiskers and sing to him, 'Thou art the limb and I the ivy; I the branch and thou the tree.'

"I want to be inferior. I want to be patted on the head and told kindly that I don't understand anything and that I have the brain of a marmoset.

"And I will try to make my husband fight if somebody suggests giving me the vote."

Poor Navajo ladies, poor, small-brained white anti-suffragettes; poor colored mammies of the old days who didn't want to be freed from slavery—you are all alike.

But the mammies of the slave days WERE set free in spite of their desire to remain slaves.

The Navajo lady SHALL be freed from a bigamist system; she shall have one whole Navajo to herself—little enough at that. And the white anti-suffragette, in spite of herself, SHALL ALSO be set free.

It is true that she isn't fit to vote. Only her intelligent sisters who know enough to favor votes for women have the intelligence necessary to make good citizens.

But of the anti-suffragettes many can be TAUGHT to think intelligently. The others will die in due time. And this country will have a population of white women, thinking, voting, taking their share in the government of the country as the equals of men.

No slavery, no bigamy, no brutal inequality for women—that is to be the system in the near future.

P. S.—Always be kind and gentle when you talk to a woman who opposes votes for women.

Pity her, do not despise her.

If she is very old, she is not to be blamed at all. For man and woman are alike in the fact that they cannot absorb new ideas after a certain age.

Remember that when Harvey announced the circulation of the blood through the human body—you would think any infant or centenarian ought to grasp the idea—very few doctors agreed with him. And they were all YOUNG men.

A Turkish slave in the harem, brown, black or pale Circassian, does not want to be set free. She wants to be one of the toys of a fat Turk.

The victim of superstition and bigotry, man or woman, does not want to be set free.

He or she will abuse you if you try to present the truth clearly.

Many very nice old ladies among the black slaves hated the idea of freedom.

The Navajo ladies are beating tom-toms at this minute, encouraging their husbands to fight for bigamy.

And the white anti-suffragette is, in the words of a distinguished poetess, "More to be pitied than blamed—she should be censured, but not turned adrift."

Buy Your Christmas Presents Now

Pay for Them Later, if You Must

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company

There is no excuse for shopping late. There is no excuse whatever for inflicting unnecessary suffering upon overworked clerks, and unnecessary annoyance and difficulty upon harassed business men.

Many of those who shop at the last moment and buy their presents when the stores are crowded, and opportunity limited, say they must buy late because they haven't the money to buy early.

Some use special presents of money, or special Christmas allowances for their Christmas shopping.

Others save up for the big day of giving and have their accumulation ready only at the last moment.

But there is no need of waiting in any case.

Whoever will, may choose his presents now, and make a reasonable payment as a guarantee of good faith, and have the presents paid for in full and delivered at the last moment, if it must be a last-moment payment.

You can buy now more cheaply than you will be able to buy just before Christmas. You can buy more conveniently, you can make your choice from a larger stock; more deliberately and more successfully.

Every individual who reads this editorial complains at least once a day of lack of consideration in others.

Let consideration for others, begin at home, consider the business men, the drivers of delivery wagons, the messenger boys, the thousands of clerks.

SHOP EARLY.

WONDER SONG

By LILLIAN LAUFERTY

HARKEN to my calling when the dusk is falling,
Joy of all the morning glow and beauty of the night.
Come with me a-gypsying across the Fields of Wonder,
Let us fare o'er all the world to part the skies asunder.
There to learn the mystery of moon and stars and thunder;
On to scan the foaming wave above each crest and under.
Let us live!

Listen to my pleading when new day is leading
Earth to joy and witchery, hearts to love and light.
Come with me, beloved, past the plains of unbelieving,
Follow, sweet, o'er gloomy hills of clamorous deceiving,
Where the stars are calling thru the sunset falling,
And the soft-hued afterglow love's mystery is weaving.
Let us live!

Outdoor Life—It Brings Power to the Race—Instructive Open-Air Amusement of Both Children and Grown-Ups Increases Nation's Vitality and Mentality

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by the Star Company

THE Mothers' and Teachers' Club of Baxley, Ga., meets to discuss subjects of mutual interest, and I am asked to read a paper for discussion on "What Should Be the Social Amusements of Our Children from Ten to Sixteen Years of Age, and the Hours and Why?"

All kinds of outdoor games and sports should form a part of the social amusements of children.

Parents and teachers will be benefited personally if they arrange their time in such a manner that they can study such amusements and act as guides and instructors for the children intrusted to their care.

The tendency of the time is more and more toward outdoor life; and this means increased vitality and more power, mental and physical, for the race.

Horseback riding, basketball, tennis, golf, croquet, water sports, running races, skating, all of these amusements are encouraged and taught.

Every Child Should Be Taught Dancing to Develop Body

Every child should be taught to dance.

It gives grace of motion, ease of deportment, and develops every muscle in the body, and causes good circulation of the blood.

Every home where there are children should encourage a half hour or an hour of dancing every evening before the retiring hour, or just before the last meal.

In small cities, where neighboring children live at convenient distances, it can be arranged that these dancing entertainments occur at different homes alternately. In this manner, at least three times a week, the amusement can be indulged in under agreeable social conditions.

Clubs organized for the study of natural history are excellent methods of entertaining children.

After awakening the interest of the children in nature, in plant life, in insect life and sea life by reading from good and instructive books on these subjects, picnic parties in the woods and on shore, arranged with the object in view of studying nature in its own haunts, will prove of great value and pleasure to the older people as well as to the younger ones.

Each child after the first few weeks of study should be asked to bring some item of information regarding an animal, an insect, a bird, or a fish, a plant, or tree to the club.

A Social Information Bureau in the Home Is Excellent

There was once a home where the host inaugurated such a plan for each member of the family. He felt valuable time was wasted at the dinner hour by idle talk, so he asked each member of the circle and each guest who remained for more than one repast, to consult his large and exhaustive library and bring some fact to relate at dinner time; some fact in history or science.

A remarkable fund of information resulted.

The hostess propounded the question at the next meal: "Does any one here know what is meant by the scientific term THE DRIFT?"

No one did; and then she proceeded to tell them. She had found her information in Ignatius Donnelly's remarkable book, "Ragnarok."

A book she would never have thought of reading save under these circumstances.

Another one of the household unearthed a book all about trees; and each day she brought a new item of information about curious trees.

Still another found a book containing "One Thousand Curious Facts."

The host told historical facts which are not generally known.

And so the little social information circle proved a success.

Instruction in Music Will Be of Value Later in Life

The Natural History Picnic Club could be made a wonderful organization if this feature were introduced and the children given an hour weekly to visit the library and hunt for information.

A penny fine for one who failed to bring an item would not be an unwise feature. Such a fund (if one resulted) should be given to help the societies for kindness to animals.

Fancy costume parties, where the dresses are representative of some period of history, are advisable pleasures for children to indulge in once a year. The child should take part in the study which the planning of the costume demands, and should be instructed in the deportment and mannerisms of that period.

Music ought to enter into the social pleasures of children.

If a child has no musical talent or taste, it should not waste time in expensive study of that art; but every child should have the opportunity to hear good music, and should be taught to listen to it, and so form a taste and an understanding which will prove of value later in life.

These are but a few suggestions; but those who have the great privileges of caring for children, as parents and teachers, ought to be able to amplify them and turn them to practical use.

THE BEST LETTER

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

YOU may write a thousand letters to the maiden you adore
And declare in every letter that you love her more and more.
You may praise her grace and beauty in a thousand glowing lines
And compare her eyes of azure with the brightest star that shines.
If you had the pen of Byron you would use it every day
In composing written worship to your sweetheart far away;
But the letter far more welcome to an older, gentler breast
Is the letter to your mother from the boy she loves the best.

Youthful blood is fierce and flaming, and when writing to your love
You will rave about your passion, swearing by the stars above;
Vowing by the moon's white splendor that the girlie you adore
Is the one you'll ever cherish as no maid was loved before.
You will pen full many a promise on those pages white and dumb
That you never can live up to in the married years to come.
But a much more precious letter, bringing more and deeper bliss
Is the letter to your mother from the boy she cannot kiss.

She will read it very often when the lights are soft and low,
Sitting in the same old corner where she held you years ago,
And, regardless of its diction or its spelling or its style,
And although its composition would provoke a critic's smile,
In her old and trembling fingers it becomes a work of art,
Stained by tears of joy and sadness as she hugs it to her heart.
Yes, the letter of all letters, look wherever you may roam,
Is the letter to your mother from her boy away from home.
